

FOR CARNEGIE LIBRARY

CITY COUNCIL PASSES ORDINANCE CREATING FUND.

TWO READINGS IN ONE NIGHT

A Two Mill Levy Will be Assessed Against Norfolk Property For the Support of a Library to be Established in This City.

Norfolk has made provisions for a public library and taken the first steps towards securing from Andrew Carnegie the library building which it is believed the iron master will build in Norfolk now that the city proposes to meet the required conditions named by Carnegie for his library gifts.

The public library will come to Norfolk largely through the efforts of the Woman's club of this city. Last evening the ordinance establishing a public library in Norfolk passed the city council on the required third reading. The ordinance which is now a part of the law of the city was presented to the council by the special library committee of the Woman's club. Members of the committee worked for the enactment of the ordinance and have been in attendance at council meetings since its introduction.

The ordinance, which unanimously passed the city council last night under suspension of the rules, establishes a city library, provides that a tax of not more than two mills may be levied for its support and places the government of the library in the hands of nine directors appointed by the mayor. To put life in the ordinance the annual estimate of expenses drawn up by the council provides for a library fund of $1,015 to be raised by a levy of one and three-fourths mills.

Mayor Durland has announced that he will name the first board of directors for the library at the next meeting of the council on Monday, July 8. It is this board of directors that will take up with Andrew Carnegie Norfolk's request for a Carnegie library. It is believed from correspondence already entered into that Carnegie will present a $10,000 building to the city now that Norfolk is ready to agree to set aside one-tenth of that amount each year for library maintenance.

Butte Gazette: The A. O. U. W. picnic was a big success. The program was very interesting and the speech by Grand Master Workman A. M. Walling was exceedingly good and well received. A large crowd was present and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the day. The ball game between Butte and Anoka vs. Spencer and Lynch was very interesting and resulted in a victory for the former, the score being 5 to 0.

Two hundred carloads of gravel—enough to ballast two miles of track—is being taken each day from the Northwestern's new gravel pit at Long Pine. Night and day shifts of men are being worked in the gravel pit and the big steam shovel which dips up two and a half yards of gravel with each dip is running almost unceasingly. The gravel forces, ballasting the Northwestern track, are now at Johnson town working eastward. With the seven train crews at work, 325 men are engaged in this work of bettering the Northwestern tracks.

Butte Gazette: Cards are out announcing the marriage of J. Earl Sweet to Miss Nellie Lauman at the home of the bride's parents at Wayne, Neb., on June 26, 1907. Mr. Sweet is the well known Oliver typewriter salesman and his friends in this part of the world join the Gazette in wishing the couple much prosperity and happiness. Mr. Sweet is one of those irrepresible salesmen who never "forgets the owl," and if J. E. does not sell the preacher that ties the nuptial knot an Oliver before he leaves the parlor, he will not be living up to his enviable and well earned record as a salesman.

Butte Gazette: C. A. Johnson in company with John Hoffman and Geo. Yesser were down from Fairfax Tuesday to look over the electric light and mill project. Mr. Hoffman is the owner of the mill at Fairfax. The lights and mill, both at Butte and Fairfax, are to be run by a 100-horse gas consuming propelling power engine, which will cost $10,000. These gentlemen were very emphatic in their statements concerning the feasibility of the scheme being a decided success. Mr. Johnson informed us that in the near future Butte would again be under the glow of electric lights and that the Butte mill will be running in time to grind her share of the bumper crop of Boyd county harvest of 1907.

The independent telephone franchise encountered no opposition on its second reading at last night's council meeting. The proposed franchise will now come up for final action at the July meeting of the council on July 8. One important clause was added to the proposed franchise last evening when a provision for underground conduits was inserted. The new section provides that the new company's lines shall, between Third and Fifth streets, be placed in underground conduits in both the alleys adjacent to Norfolk avenue and also that the line of wires from the exchange office to these two branches should be placed underground. The old franchise granted some years ago to the Madison County Telephone company was formally repealed by the council last evening.

STOCK RUN NEXT MONTH

RANGE STUFF WILL THEN GO TOWARD MARKET.

FORECASTS NOT POSSIBLE NOW

The Fact That the Western Range Has Been Chopped Up Into Smaller Ranches Has Done Away With Old Time Forecasts From Few.

In another month western cattle shipments through Norfolk will begin. By the latter part of July the movement of cattle from the western ranges on to Omaha and Chicago markets will be "on" and thousands of cattle riding on to their eastern doom will get a passing glance at Norfolk.

What the cattle shipment of the year will be it is impossible to foretell at this time, but there is no reason to believe that the increase in shipments will not be in evidence again this year. In the old days when a dozen big outfits held the ranges in the western ranch land tributary to Norfolk it was possible from the reports of these cattle barons to form an accurate advance forecast of the shipments. But with the splitting up of the big outfits into numberless little ranches it is no longer possible to have the old forecasts.

The shipments to market will depend, too, upon the outcome of the present controversy between the packers and commission men over the post-mortem inspections. The packers have made a new rule by virtue of which they refuse to pay for cow stuff until after the postmortem inspection by government officials, so that diseased cows are thrown out and not paid for. Under former methods the cattle were all paid for and the packers stood the losses on animals found, after slaughtering, to be diseased. The commission men have been putting up a stiff fight but it is now claimed that many stock shippers favor the new rule, declaring that it will force the diseased herds to be cleaned up.

As one result of the new rule, barring "she" stuff, the steer market has been jumping high.

PHILIP AVENUE CLOSING MATTER

Case May Not Be Carried up to Highest Court in Land.

It is quite possible that Philip avenue closing case may never reach the supreme court of the United States for final review. The remonstrators who instituted injunction proceedings against the city council when it was proposed to close Philip avenue for a Northwestern depot have opened negotiations with the city with a view of bringing the controversy in the courts to an end.

The closing of Philip avenue has ceased to exist as a live issue but the case which the remonstrators lost in the district and the state supreme courts is pending for review in the supreme court of the United States. Save for settling which side of the controversy would have to pay the "costs," the only effect of a decision from the highest court of America at this time would be to throw light on the legal features of the case.

The men who started the injunction proceedings and who retained former Senator Allen to prosecute their case have asked for a settlement out of court, the proposition submitted being that each side should pay its own court costs, that the action should be dismissed and that the city council should formally declare that the avenue should remain open. It was stated that the court costs of the city would be slight and that attorneys' fees might represent the principal item that the city would have to pay in case of dismissal in accordance with the proposed settlement.

A committee of Councilmen Garvin, Kaufman and Craven representing the city is to confer with Attorneys S. D. Robertson and M. D. Tyler as to their charges for representing the city's interests in case the city pays its own attorney fees through the compromise. A report will be made to the next council meeting.

Eckstrom, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church officiating. The groom is a Cuming county farmer. Two hundred invited guests witnessed the ceremony. The newly married couple will reside on the Hansen farm east of West Point.

The late heavy rains have greatly benefited growing crops of all kinds. Mostly all the corn has been cultivated once. Prospects are excellent for all kinds of field crops, oats and potatoes giving the most promise. Some fruit will be raised in this section but the yield will be far below the average.

F. Waila was elected delegate to the state convention of Women's clubs.

The fortieth anniversary of the founding of St. Anthony's church, at St. Charles, in this county, was celebrated with elaborate ceremonies last week. This church is a mission adjunct to the West Point parish and is under the charge of Rev. Joseph Ruesing of West Point.

James F. Blahoves of Battle Creek and Miss Anna Brozek were married at the court house by County Judge Dewald.

The weather is now settled fair and agricultural operations are being vigorously prosecuted all over this section. Corn is making an amazing growth and with favorable weather will soon compare well with the ordinary season. New potatoes are being dug and many garden vegetables grown locally are in the market.

George Munderloh, a well known farmer living northwest of West Point died at a hospital in Omaha from stomach trouble. His remains were brought home and interred in the Boemer cemetery. He was one of the older settlers of the county and a man of wealth. He was 62 years of age.

Miss Julia Marek and Allen J. McKean were married at the Catholic church. The groom is a resident of Marion, Iowa, where he is engaged in business and the young couple will make their home at that place.

A number of the rural school teachers of Cuming county have left this vicinity for better positions elsewhere. Miss Bess I. Neligh has been appointed a teacher in the Norfolk public schools, Miss Emma Wiggers at Beemer city schools and Miss Bertha Sexton at Burwell.

CONSTERNATION IS CREATED.

Item in Norfolk Democrat "Goes After" Own Party Officials.

No little consternation was caused in Democratic circles last evening by the appearance of the following item in the Norfolk Democrat:

"Mr. Mayor, you are one of the oldest citizens of our city; gentlemen of the city council, you are of the most ancient residents. All of you were vouched for by the Democrat; we advocated your election, not for revenue, but for the betterment of the city. We told the voters to cast their ballots for you; we assured them that this was good advice. Many of them paid us for the Democrat and paid us for this advice. Now we do not wish to have a claim against us of 'want of consideration.' Will you do your part? We have done ours. What, nothing wrong? Send your chief of police to us."

NO PAVING THIS SUMMER

MAYOR DURLAND SAYS PLAN CAN NOT BE CARRIED OUT.

HOPES NOT TO BE REALIZED

Some of the City Council Who Do Not Desire to See Paving Go by the Board Suggest a Method Which May Solve the Difficulty.

Norfolk avenue will not be paved this summer or fall. In Mayor Durland's opinion paving for this year is a dead letter and complications in the city finances seem to support this position.

During the Friday administration all preliminary steps were taken to provide for the coating of Norfolk avenue with brick from Seventh street to the Northfork bridge. By the terms of the paving ordinance the cost of street intersections fall on the city and it is on this proposition that the paving project seems doomed to come to at least temporary grief.

For some months the general fund of the city has been in an exhausted condition and as the cost of paving the street intersections mounts towards something like $6,000 the condition of city finances has been realized to afford a possible obstacle to the immediate paving on the city's principal business street.

At one time when the difficulty was first broached it was understood that private parties contemplated offering to take the city's "certificate of indebtedness" in exchange for ready cash to finance the street intersection paving but the doubtful legality that hovers about Norfolk's system of "certificates" is thought to have occasioned alarm in the direction of these proposals.

Another way suggested out of the hole was for the city to "borrow" money from one city fund where a cash balance flourished and place the money temporarily in the street fund. This has been a common practice in the past when city improvements were hampered by a prospective lack of funds in the necessary quarter. The present mayor, however, has declared that such a course would not meet his approval.

Among some of the council who have no desire to see paving go by the board a new solution for the paving middle is being worked out. If Norfolk was a city of the first class with a population above 5,000 people the few thousand dollars necessary to carry the paving through could be voted at a bond election held to give Norfolk her first paved street.

At the last effort to determine the city's population the number of people fell a few hundred short of the desired 5,000 mark. A systematic effort to raise Norfolk into the higher class of cities is being seriously considered.

If Norfolk wants to be a city of the first class she can, it is said by Norfolk attorneys, being within the city limits several adjacent additions, really a part of Norfolk but never incorporated into the city. This can be done, it is said, by action of the council preceding a petition to the district court. If Edgewater Park, Klug addition, and part of Queen City, Park and Haase additions were added to Norfolk a special census would make Norfolk a city of the first class. This move Norfolk would gain all the privileges that the law accords cities having from 5,000 to 25,000 people.

As next spring will not show any great surplus of cash in Norfolk's general fund, it is said that Norfolk to gain paved streets should be a city of more than 5,000 people when the paving season comes next year. Paving under this program would not be possible this year, it is said, on account of incidental delays.

Speaking of the paving situation Mayor Durland said yesterday: "The improvement that I am interested in at this time is a public park for Norfolk. If we can get a public park of twenty-five acres as has been proposed, I think we ought to vote the necessary bonds. As regards paving I said some months ago that I thought that there were other improvements more important than paving. Now I think the park is one of these. We might make arrangements to carry our paving through next year but premature agitation might tend to injure the park project which is where our present efforts ought to be centered."

Concerning the announcement that there will be no paving in Norfolk this year, one business man said: "The people of Norfolk will be deeply disappointed to learn that the plans for paving Norfolk avenue from Seventh street to the North Fork bridge have fallen through. All preliminary plans were taken last year under the John Friday administration for the paving, a petition was properly signed and presented to the city council and an ordinance was passed. Every detail was attended to and the people were given hope that at last this vital improvement would come. The announcement that the present administration can not see its way clear to carry out the plans will be received with regret. The paving of the business portion of Norfolk avenue is by all means the most important public improvement before the people of Norfolk today and all our energy ought to be turned toward that end until it is accomplished. It is with a city as it is with an individual. One thing at a time and that done well, is a good motto. We have started the paving matter; now let's finish it before we get sidetracked onto a lot of side issues. If the way to pave Norfolk avenue lies in the bringing in of additions, and if this can be done under the law, then for the sake of Norfolk let's go it and do it at the first possible moment."
