

THE NORFOLK DAILY NEWS

Established 1847. LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD IN A CITY OF 6,000.

Three Editions Daily—Morning, Afternoon and Evening.

THE HUSE PUBLISHING COMPANY W. N. HUSE, President N. A. HUSE, Secretary

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Delivered by carrier or at Norfolk postoffice, 10 cents a week.

Telephone: Editorial Department, No. 22 Business Office and Job Rooms, No. 1122

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Justice supreme court—M. B. REESE, Lincoln.

For Judge, Ninth district—A. A. WELCH, Wayne.

For clerk—GEO. E. RICHARDSON.

For treasurer—FRANK A. PETERSON.

For sheriff—J. J. CLEMENTS.

For clerk of district court—W. H. FIELD.

For supervisor—FRANK S. PERDUE.

For assessor—P. W. RUTH.

For coroner—DR. H. L. KINDRED.

For surveyor—A. J. THATCH.

For commissioner, Third district—JOHN H. HARDING.

Norfolk Precinct. For justices of the peace—C. F. FISHER.

For constables—G. F. HILGER.

For road overseer—J. A. MOORE.

Sheriff J. J. Clements has been a credit to Madison county, and it is for the best interest of the county that he be re-elected.

the best public interest demands for that office. Mr. Ruth has earned the respect of his acquaintances by reason of his fairness and absolute impartiality in taking the assessment.

There is no reason why Sheriff J. J. Clements, the present sheriff of Madison county and republican candidate for re-election, should not be replaced by the voters of the county.

Madison county is very fortunate in having secured in the office of county superintendent a man of the type of Frank S. Perdue. Mr. Perdue has been named by republicans of the county for re-election and he has been paid the compliment of having no opposition either in the primary or in the election.

It has been forecasted that Frank A. Peterson will run well up among the Madison county candidates who will be elected to office in the forthcoming election.

George E. Richardson has served as clerk of Madison county but one term. He has made an excellent official in every way. His office administration has been flawless.

Christopher Schavland has given Madison county excellent public service. The people of Madison county know him and know his worth.

John H. Harding was nominated by the republicans of Madison county at the primary election as a candidate for a second term as county commissioner.

Dr. H. L. Kindred of Meadow Grove has faithfully and ably served Madison county as coroner. His services have been so acceptable, in fact, that no opposition cared to test his popularity either in the primary or in the regular election.

man some time and cost the county some considerable expense for the necessary journey. It is desirable that the county commissioners should be distributed over the county as nearly as possible, and this fair distribution would be defeated if John Harding were not to be re-elected.

It would hardly be fair for Madison county to have two commissioners living at Madison and none at all in the west end of the county.

Christopher Schavland has given Madison county people splendid public service. It was not his own ambition that made him a candidate for county judge.

A vote for the Madison county republican ticket is a vote for men who have been tried and found worthy and efficient in the county offices.

ALL FAVOR FALL FESTIVAL. The business men of Norfolk are apparently a unit in favoring the establishment of some sort of creditable corn palace or other type of fall festival in Norfolk.

A COMPLETE TICKET. The Madison county republican ticket is complete. There are no gaps.

The Minneapolis Journal says of Dr. Andrews' visit to that city Saturday: Dr. Andrews, questioned about political sentiment in the east, confessed to great surprise over the conditions as he found them.

FIGHTING HORSE THIEVES. One fact stands out pre-eminent in connection with the organization last year of northern Nebraska farmers against horse thieves.

COMING TO SEE THE BENEFIT. It is gratifying to note that more and more of the citizens who live in additions not now included within the legal city limits of Norfolk, are coming to the belief that annexation will work benefit to them.

Fire protection alone would mean much for the people living outside the city limits, and outside the present city limits, ought to benefit by the annexation.

LET THE HORSE DO THE WORK.

It was not so very long ago that they told us the horse was at the end of his rope. They were evidently mistaken. Today the horse is more in demand than ever before and he is going to keep right on being pressed into further and further service.

In Norfolk today there has been established a big horse market. Hundreds of horses of western range are brought into this horse market at frequent intervals and are sold in the auction ring to scores of buyers gathered here from several states.

As a matter of fact the farmer is relying more and more upon the sturdy and uncompromising horse to solve the industrial problem of the agricultural regions.

Labor is today scarce in all lines of industry. And particularly is this true of the farm. Many young men fail to appreciate the beauty of living out in the open air and seek the congested centers of population.

It will take more than the steam engine and the automobile to run out the horse.

SAYS HUGHES IS THE MAN. Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, chancellor of the Nebraska state university and one of the broad-gauged educators of the country, who is intimately in touch with things political and economic, has just returned from a trip in the east.

Three times has John Koeningstein been mayor of Norfolk—and he has never aspired to other public office.

John Koeningstein was born in Rhein Pfalz, a small Bavarian state, November 3, 1838. It was near the town of Kusel. Between the ages of six and fourteen years he was educated in the common schools and later attend Latin school, where languages were taught.

When he will perpetrate one of these, Hughes steers his own course without the slightest attention to his own political fortunes.

Some card players seem to think that slamming them down hard on the table is half the game.

When a man economizes, he buys fewer clothes; when a woman economizes, she buys less to eat.

A railroad brakeman in northern Nebraska had a fit the other day after making a run. It is said that fits are scarce in the uniforms supplied brakemen nowadays.

With this year's crop and this year's enormous prices, the northern Nebraska farmer can buy whatever he wants, without regard to the fact that good prices are the rule for all commodities.

Three Times Mayor of Norfolk Prominent Avenue Today Bears His Name

Forty-two days were consumed in the trans-Atlantic trip. Landing in New York July 2, the mother went to Cincinnati and remained a year.

JOHN KOENIGSTEIN

Everybody in Norfolk, and pretty nearly everybody who ever visited Norfolk, has heard of Koeningstein avenue. The name of that street stands pre-eminent among the names of Norfolk thoroughfares because it is one of the most attractive avenues of the town.

John Koeningstein was told, after a battle in the civil war, that he might as well send a last message to his friends at home. He carries the bullet in his left shoulder-blade to this day.

It was February 8, 1873, when John Koeningstein first landed in Norfolk. He built as a drug store at that time the building occupied today by L. Wetzel, gunsmith.

Three times has John Koeningstein been mayor of Norfolk—and he has never aspired to other public office.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

walked into New Orleans off that boat. All of the soldiers who had been imprisoned at Tyler, Tex., wore woefully ragged. Here, however, new clothing was provided.

Here a thirty-days' furlough was granted for resting up. During that furlough the war came to an end and President Lincoln was killed. Private Koeningstein was ordered to appear at Springfield, Ill., to be mustered out.

To Springfield President Lincoln was brought for burial. There John Koeningstein saw the slain president as his body lay in state, being viewed by thousands, in the Illinois capitol building. And the dead president looked like life, as though he were peacefully asleep.

To the funeral of President Lincoln and to the cemetery where he was placed in the vault, John Koeningstein marched under command of "Fighting Joe" Hooker.

On April 20, 1865, Soldier Koeningstein became again a private citizen. He then went back to his mother's farm for a long rest. In 1867 he was married to Mrs. Harri. She owned a farm and John Koeningstein engaged in its operation.

After the fall of Vicksburg July 4, 1863, this regiment was transferred to Steele's army and stationed at Little Rock till March, 1864, when they marched, with General Thayer's army, to the Little Missouri river.

After the fire and before rebuilding, Mr. Koeningstein built a frame drug store for temporary use. It was erected within a week. It is now occupied by Mrs. Cummins as a boarding house.

Mr. Koeningstein laid out four additions to Norfolk. He bought the farm which the late Frederick Dederman had homesteaded, which included part of The Heights and a considerable strip north of Norfolk avenue.

Mr. Koeningstein is the father of seven sons and one daughter, Mrs. R. A. Mittelstadt of this city. Four of the sons are living today: Jack Koeningstein, Ludwick Koeningstein, William Koeningstein and Arthur J. Koeningstein.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

John Koeningstein's good business judgment has made him financially independent. Today he is one of the well-to-do of northern Nebraska.

are unprotected stables still to be found.

Some card players seem to think that slamming them down hard on the table is half the game.

When a man economizes, he buys fewer clothes; when a woman economizes, she buys less to eat.

A railroad brakeman in northern Nebraska had a fit the other day after making a run. It is said that fits are scarce in the uniforms supplied brakemen nowadays.

With this year's crop and this year's enormous prices, the northern Nebraska farmer can buy whatever he wants, without regard to the fact that good prices are the rule for all commodities.

I am mightily struck with the festive idea that is being carried out at Tilden each year for the farmers," said a prominent Norfolk farmer.

Walding, Kinnan & Marvin, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Hall's Catarah Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system.

How's This? We offer one hundred dollars reward for any case of catarah that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarah Cure.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.

There is always talk going on about the worst man in town, but nobody seems to care much about the best man in town.