ANOTHER SEARCH FOR THE MISS-ING OLSON CHILD.

Anna C. Miller of Sloux City, Possessed of a Vivid Imagination and Strange "Powers" Thinks She Can Locate the Missing Child.

Sioux City, Ia., Feb. 28.-The Tribune revives the Olson disappearance Salter. case through Anna Christie Miller, a girl mystic, gifted with bewildering December.

Three visits to the Rosalie renter's shack by Miss Miller in the last few weeks have disclosed startling and absolute proofs of the flawless accuracy of her unparalleled "second sight." She declares stoutly that Lillie Olson was murdered by a man on the night was left in the Olson stable until a hole was dug underneath the cabin, and that shortly afterwards the dead body was wrapped in a grewsome covering of grain sacks and barrel slats freshments were served. and removed to some point in the "Sid" Young Successor.

Miss Miller is not only positive that a ghastly piece of foul play lies back of the mysterious disappearance of Lillie Olson, but avers that other members of the Olson family have been slain. She believes that before she completes her clairvoyancy at Rosalie, she will prove that Olson's brother (who recently disappeared) as well as two of the Olson clan's children who are dead, died at some murderer's hand.

The latest angle of the dramatic events at Rosalie is as yet shrouded in utter secrecy in the environs of the little town. Sheriff Dorsey and his frail little guide, who is just a slip of a girl whose appearance belies even her age, have worked together under the utmost secrecy. Dorsey is on the Olson premises today. Miss Miller is momentarily awaiting a telegram from him summoning her again to the spot.

Rosalie Unsuspecting And Rosalie, racked in the past by lynchings and sinister events such as have seldom fallen to the lot of a scantily populated community of the verge of disclosing grewsome proofs of heartless misdeeds.

For years Miss Miller has amused herself with card reading, mind reading and "second sight" performances that have made her friends in Sioux City marvel. When the Olson tragedy was brought to her notice, she at once conceived the idea of solving the mystery. Presently, according to an interview with her, facts began to reveal themselves to her in mental pantomime. On the screen of her marvelous brain retina, she says she saw a POOR CONSUMER HAS THINGS man strike the little girl with a club on the night of the furious rain storm after her brothers had sent her home from the pasture.

"I could see," said Miss Miller, "that the stick cut her head. The man Mrs. Norfolk Can Breathe With Relief, seized her at the neck when she screamed. Then the little girl fell down. The man put her somewhere in one of the sheds or stable. Then he dug a hole under the house, about two and a half feet deep, covering her up in it. Later I 'got' a picture of the same man, whose features were indiscent. tinct, assisted by another figure, either a man or a woman, I don't know which, taking the body from the hole, filling the hole up and taking the body away. It was on a moonlight night."
