SHOWS MUST BE "ZIPPY"-ADE.

No Others Need Apply For Favor in America.

New York, Aug. 15.-What New York wants, and, for that matter, Chicago and Boston, and, perhaps, Kokomo, too, is the "zippy show,', says George Ade. For this reason it is possible that we have temporarily been deprived of the George Ade 14ay, says the author, because, after writing "The County Chairman" and "The College Widow," he finds himself this season concocting "zippy shows." It is a form of entertainment that has disqualified Ibsen and Sudermann and Materlinck, and all those highbrows of the drama. 'The Sultan of Sulu," the autho says, "was nothing much until it was manicured and massaged before it came into New York. Then it became 'zippy,' and it was a success."

George Ade's private and personal opinion of the "zippy show" is not ntellectual. It will not even bear comparison with some of the opinions of the American dramatists' club, that are right from the shoulder and unequivocal.

"You've not been playwriting much, lately?" Ade was asked.

"A play is something that grows, and I may have been sowing seeds; but nothing sprouting so far." "Not even a political play?"

"That reminds me," he said, taking nervous stride across the room and back. "Do you know, I believe there must me a regular organization of mind readers in this town, with a system that can't be beaten. Now, of course, I don't claim to have a corner on originality, and I don't expect any one to believe that I ever wrote an original piece-that would be too much; but that deadly parallel idea, which squeezes the dramatic author into a state of unrecognizable humility, ought to be stopped.

"It is inhuman; there should be a ociety for the prevention of cruelty to playwrights, authorized by the state to control any outside interference with originality. Of course, that would entail a commission on originality to decide the validity of the issue. As to the organization of mind time runing a separator up north. reades, who write your plays for you discovery.

"Would you advise the literary man to write plays?"

"I don't believe there is a man living who could make a reputation in literature by writing a play. The conditions are all against it. Usually by the time a play is produced there is the time a play is produced there is nothing left of its original form, style | GIVEN AWAY or destiny.

The author and his manuscript are put through a mangling process that flattens them both first, and after that the actors and the stage manager trim them. Then, of course, there's the boss; the manager, who sees his rival across the street doing something that makes a hit and he wants it on his YEAR HOLDS MUCH OF PROMISE.

"Once I wrote a political play. It took me two years to build it. It was almost produced-that is to say, the cast was picked out. Then a play looms up called 'The Man of the Hour' and-well, that's what I mean by the deadly parallel. I may do The Norfolk auditorium will open that play yet-just because!" and the its doors for the 1908 season on Sep author threw away a half finished cigar carelessly.

"Will you go into politics?"

"No, no more than to vote for Taft Of course, I was proud to be a delegate to the convention, but I had all the politics I wanted when I was reporting conventions for a paper in Chicago, No. I guess I had all I wanted of politics then.

"I'll tell you I have in mind a book, a great big, fat heavy weight of thought," he continued.

"What about?"

"Everything under the wouldn't forget anything. I'd call the book simply 'goodstuff.' The best seven baseball stories ever written for a newspaper, for instance. The best could tell you what he considers the best story in its line he ever read. "Why, it would be a sacred work of art, compiled with scissors and paste; it would be a reference compendium for any playwright who was tarting in, fresh and hopeful and funny. Think of the obscure genius it would resurrect. A book like that and the city directory would be library enough for anybody. It would keep a family in reading material long after they were grown up and married and all settled up among themselves. I wouldn't have any original contri butions in it at all, because nearly all the good stuff has been printed,

FOR CORRECT SOLUTIONS TO THE PUZZLE BELOW

THE line of Pianos carried by The Bennett Co. is of such a high degree of excellence, and the various makes so well and favorably known, that their names are already household words in the najority of homes in Nebraska and neighboring states, but in order that all may become familiar with the fact that the greatest line of high-grade Pianos in the West is to be found in our warerooms, and in order to obtain a large and compr hensive list of prospective purchasers of Pianos and Organs to whom we may present the merits of our instruments and explain our equitable selling system, we have inaugurated a contest which we believe to be the most interesting, and at the same time the most liberal ever attempted by any Piano house

THE CONTEST

Printed in the coupon below you will find a Puzzle Automobile Wheel, around the tire of which we have placed the letters which form the names of some of the different makes of Planos we represent. We want you to rearrange these letters correctly and write the names which the letters form in the places left for that purpose between the spokes of the wheel. It order that you may easily understand how to do it, we have completed one answer. Study the puzzle carefully, also the arrangement of the word PACKARD, and you will have little trouble in completing the rest of the answers.

THE RULES GOVERNING THE CONTEST

Are very simple and will be easily understood. They must be strictly complied with, however. The contest is open to all, except employes of The Bennett Company or persons connected with other music houses. The correct names and addresses of 4 prospective purchasers of Piancs or Organs MUST be written in the spaces provided for that purpose in the wheel. Exercise great care in sending in these names, for, as explained above, the principal object of this contest is to enable us to widen the scope of our operations and get in touch with those who are now, or may

The contest will extend over a period of 30 days, beginning August 21st and ending September 19th, and prizes will be awarded and the winners announced as soon as possible after the closing of the contest.

No contestant may send in more than one solution.

In order that all may have equal chances of obtaining an award, the prizes will be distributed as explained below
