Norfolk National bank by a committee from the board of directors, consisting of Senator F. J. Hale of Atkinson, Dr. A. Bear and H. E. Hardy, came at a time when the bank's cash funds are unusually high on account of the corn moving season at hand. $65,900 in cash funds, that is in currency, government notes and bank notes, was counted during the morning. Norfolk bankers have received during the past week copies of an address delivered by E. R. Gurney, vice president of the First National bank of Fremont, before the Wyoming bankers' association and entitled, "The Imminence of the Postal Savings Bank." The unique thing about the pamphlet is that it is published by Elbert Hubbard's "roycrofters" at East Aurora, N. Y., in true roycroft style. The cement sidewalk season is virtually over, the final appearance of cold weather putting a veto on the work. Unusual progress has been made during the year in getting a more systematic arrangement of walks over town. The sidewalk campaign has now reached the stage where walks are being called for on both sides of every street, avoiding the discrimination against property owners that exists when the burden of maintaining walks is thrown entirely on one side of the street. One bad gap remains on Madison avenue near the railroad tracks, a gap which the mayor has ordered closed by the contractor.

The library board has started out to collect the subscriptions pledged towards the purchase of the Norfolk avenue site for the Carnegie library. The securing of a deed to the land is the next step towards getting a public library and is a formality depending upon the collection of the subscription pledges. The library plans will also be forwarded in a short time to Mr. Carnegie. The plans are still on exhibition for public criticism. One change from the usual plan of public libraries is to be noted in the Norfolk plans. The stack or book room is pushed into the back ground, arrangement being made to have the sides of the reading rooms lined with books in easy access to patrons. The stack room, which is a relatively small room, will be used as additional room is demanded. Mr. Stitt, who drew the plans, says that the new library would have a book capacity of 20,000 books. The plans were recently submitted to Miss Templeton, the state librarian. She suggested alterations in two doors and a change in the arrangement of stacks in the stack room but otherwise thought that the plans were thoroughly in accord with modern library demands. One of the difficulties which may confront the board may be to keep the building within the $10,000 limit which Mr. Carnegie's donation imposes. It is the desire of the board to let the contract sometime in January, as it is considered that the best terms could be secured from contractors at that time.

Finds New Use for Camera.

G. D. Butterfield of the firm of Butterfield & Son, recently worked out an innovation in the matter of insurance policies which may attract considerable attention. Incidentally he has found a new use for the camera.

Recently in re-insuring their various ranch and farm properties east of Creighton, constituting a score or so of clusters of buildings, Mr. Butterfield in accompanying the insurance agent took "snap shots" at all of the buildings, where necessary taking more than one picture. The photographs, which also served to give a complete aerial view of the property, were used in making out the policies, a picture of the house or buildings in question being attached to each policy and supplementing the regular description in figures.

The recent fire, which totally destroyed the big fifteen-room ranch house, on the Butterfield ranch near Magnet, brought one of the policies into use. The insurance adjuster arrived in Norfolk in the morning and by noon a draft for the insurance was in the hands of Mr. Butterfield. The photograph has proven useful moreover in rebuilding the property as well as in adjusting the insurance.

Carpenters will start to work on the ranch building the morning after Thanksgiving. So satisfactory was the old building that it will be exactly duplicated in rebuilding.

J. B. Parks, in charge of the ranch, lost a considerable part of his furniture in the fire. Mr. Parks has been with the Butterfields for twenty-one years.

It is thought that the fire started from a flue
