Theater Panic Is Over.

Last year was the hardest year during the past decade on the show business, due to the panic of October, 1907. When the financial flurry came, theatrical attractions went to the wall by the hundred and at the end of the 1907-8 season few were left on the road. The east failed to recuperate from the effects of the money stringency last fall and, as the east produces the shows of the country, there was a scarcity of attractions all last season which made playhouse managers grey headed with worry. It was almost impossible last year to get any
