TAFT'S BOXING IS DENIED.

President Blames Physical Instructor for Stories of Pugilistic Prowess. Beverly, Mass., Aug. 21.-President Taft is angry enough with his physical culture instructor, Dr. Barker, to put on the boxing gloves and hand

As a consequence, the anti-fat man is doing a tremendous lot of explainhis fault.

"The president is not taking boxing lessons, has never taken them down here, and in all probability will never gossip.

"But the papers have declared he was almost knocked out by his instructor," said one of the questioners. "Well, I can't help what lies are sent out from this town," cried Carpenter at his wit's end. "All there is to these stories is that the president is taking morning exercises regularly under the guidance of a physical instructor. He exercises with weights, dumbbells, weighing machines and other gymnasium apparatus. Barker came to the white house for a couple of months before the president left Washington, and his duties here are no different from what they were

"I never said that the president was taking boxing lessons," said Barker today. "I never said that the president's weight was this or that. I have never said he would make a fine prize fighter or wrestler, with a little more practice; I never said any of these things some of the papers say. It is a shame and no wonder the president is feeling sore about it."
