afternoon, evidence was introduced to show that the bullets taken from the body of the murdered woman correspond exactly with the calibre of those yet remaining in a revolver belonging to the prisoner and which, it was shown, he bought during the middle of May. The revolver was found after the crime, and two cartridges in it were found to be discharged and others contained bullets similar to those which killed the man's sister.

Tries to Accuse Hired Man.

Previous to the arrest of Flege, which followed the confession of Albert Eichtenkamp, the hired man, Flege told the detectives that the hired man did not know where the revolver was and that he could not have used it. After the confession Flege attemptdurable and save nearly $10 on an ed to lay the crime upon the man.

Miss Ida Hendricks, the young farm er's daughter to whom Flege was paying attention at the time, told of a visit Flege made to her home June 30, the day of the murder. He came in him a proposition. his automobile at 4:30 o'clock and appeared unusually nervous and excitable.
