Killed a Coyote. After a desperate fight, in which Frank Buttrick, his dog and a coyote participated Thursday afternoon on the Buttrick farm one mile east and two miles north of Norfolk, the man became the victor only after he had cut the throat of the coyote with a pocket jackknife. Mr. Buttrick was at work in the field when his attention was attracted by the noise of his pet dog and a coyote. They were engaged in playfully chasing each other around the field. Soon the dog became angry and, sinking his teeth into the coyote's hind-quarters, commenced a struggle with the wild beast. To assist his pet dog Mr. Buttrick made hurried steps to the scene of the struggle. Seizing the coyote by the throat, Mr. Buttrick rained blow after blow on the animal's head with his bare fist. This in no way subdued the animal. The wolf, angered by the painful wounds inflicted by the dog, which still held fast his grip on the hind-quarters, came very near biting Buttrick several times. Seeing the animal could not be overpowered by physical strength, Mr. Buttrick managed to get out his pocket knife. Opening the blade with his teeth he cut the coyote's throat.

Frank showed quite a bit of nerve when he first stopped the team with one hand then took the wads out of the wound. At present he is doing nicely, and hopes are entertained that his thumb, index and middle finger may be saved.

NO WORK FOR THIS HEIRESS. A Court Referee Says Hilda Morris Should Stay in School. New York, Sept. 17.—It has just been decided by Referee William Klein that Hilda Charlotte Edgerton Morris, 19 years old, who until the summer vacation began attended a boarding school for girls at 39 East Fifty-seventh street, and who on the death of her mother, Mrs. Julia M. Curtis, will come into an estate worth more than three million dollars, should not be compelled to work for a living, as was suggested by one of the lawyers in the case before him. Miss Morris is one of the three children of Mrs. Julia M. Curtis by her first husband, Peter Henry Morris.

Mrs. Curtis is one of the three heirs to the estate left by the late Miss Mary G. Pinkney. Mr. Klein said that as such heir Mrs. Curtis was entitled to six million dollars of the estate of Miss Pinkney, and that upon her death, under the terms of Miss Pinkney's will, Mrs. Curtis' share of the estate was to pass to her two children, Hilda Charlotte Edgerton Morris and Louis H. Morris, now of age. Consequently Miss Morris will come into two million dollars in this way and is interested in other property worth about one million dollars.

In regard to the suggestion that Miss Morris, the 3-million-dollar heiress, should "work for her living," in case her present income is insufficient, Referee Klein said in his report, filed in the supreme court: "Some argument was raised before me by counsel to the committee that the infant (Miss Morris), if she has not sufficient funds properly to protect her, should go out and perform labor. From observation made by me of the infant I find that her physical condition is such that she can do no labor whatsoever. "It would be extremely imprudent to send Miss Morris to live with her mother. The affidavits and papers in this proceeding are full of charges and counter charges which show that the surroundings are not such as would lead to her welfare or betterment. "Bearing this in mind, I recommend to the court that Miss Morris be not required to reside with her mother. She should be provided for and maintained, separate and apart, and should be allowed to finish her education. Further, she should be supported and maintained in the same style as she has heretofore been accustomed."

Guests Are Turned Away From London Hostelry. London, Sept. 21.—The experiment of a non-tip hotel in the Strand in London has proved a success. Since the establishment was opened a year ago there has not been a vacant bedroom, a record which could not be equaled by any other London hotel. Every day the management has had to turn guests away. Nearly a quarter of a million guests have stayed at the hotel in the 344 days it has been opened.

The success of the hotel, the directors believe, is mainly due to the non-tip rule. Guests are forbidden to offer any servant of the hotel a gratuity, and servants found accepting them are dismissed. People know exactly what it is going to cost them before they set foot in the hotel, and when they pay their bill there is no need for them to put their hands into their pockets to tip anybody. Although the rule against tipping is rigidly enforced by the management there have been visitors who have insisted upon offering gratuities. In order to protect the servants from the temptation the management has had to request these visitors either to abide by the regulations or to seek accommodation elsewhere.

The management has had no difficulty in securing plenty of waiters and chamber maids, despite the fact that they receive no tips. CAFE DE L'OPERA IN NEW HANDS. Louis Martin Has Acquired Interest in New Controlling Company. New York, Sept. 21.—Louis Martin today acquired an interest in Rich's Corporation, which was organized to Pops Leave Ticket Blank. Lincoln, Sept. 21.—The populist party state central committee at a meeting held here last evening to take action on the declination of Governor Shallenberger to accept the nomination for governor, decided not to fill the vacancy. Three propositions were presented—to select a straight-out populist; to endorse the candidacy of Chester H. Aldrich, the republican nominee; or to leave the office vacant on the ticket, and the latter plan was adopted.

At a meeting of members of the prohibition state central committee a statement was made announcing the withdrawal of George I. Wright the candidate for governor. Prohibitionists are advised in the statement to unite in support of the republican candidate. Try a Daily News Want-Ad.

NO WORK FOR THIS HEIRESS. A Court Referee Says Hilda Morris Should Stay in School. New York, Sept. 17.—It has just been decided by Referee William Klein that Hilda Charlotte Edgerton Morris, 19 years old, who until the summer vacation began attended a boarding school for girls at 39 East Fifty-seventh street, and who on the death of her mother, Mrs. Julia M. Curtis, will come into an estate worth more than three million dollars, should not be compelled to work for a living, as was suggested by one of the lawyers in the case before him. Miss Morris is one of the three children of Mrs. Julia M. Curtis by her first husband, Peter Henry Morris.

Mrs. Curtis is one of the three heirs to the estate left by the late Miss Mary G. Pinkney. Mr. Klein said that as such heir Mrs. Curtis was entitled to six million dollars of the estate of Miss Pinkney, and that upon her death, under the terms of Miss Pinkney's will, Mrs. Curtis' share of the estate was to pass to her two children, Hilda Charlotte Edgerton Morris and Louis H. Morris, now of age. Consequently Miss Morris will come into two million dollars in this way and is interested in other property worth about one million dollars.

In regard to the suggestion that Miss Morris, the 3-million-dollar heiress, should "work for her living," in case her present income is insufficient, Referee Klein said in his report, filed in the supreme court: "Some argument was raised before me by counsel to the committee that the infant (Miss Morris), if she has not sufficient funds properly to protect her, should go out and perform labor. From observation made by me of the infant I find that her physical condition is such that she can do no labor whatsoever. "It would be extremely imprudent to send Miss Morris to live with her mother. The affidavits and papers in this proceeding are full of charges and counter charges which show that the surroundings are not such as would lead to her welfare or betterment. "Bearing this in mind, I recommend to the court that Miss Morris be not required to reside with her mother. She should be provided for and maintained, separate and apart, and should be allowed to finish her education. Further, she should be supported and maintained in the same style as she has heretofore been accustomed."

Guests Are Turned Away From London Hostelry. London, Sept. 21.—The experiment of a non-tip hotel in the Strand in London has proved a success. Since the establishment was opened a year ago there has not been a vacant bedroom, a record which could not be equaled by any other London hotel. Every day the management has had to turn guests away. Nearly a quarter of a million guests have stayed at the hotel in the 344 days it has been opened.

The success of the hotel, the directors believe, is mainly due to the non-tip rule. Guests are forbidden to offer any servant of the hotel a gratuity, and servants found accepting them are dismissed. People know exactly what it is going to cost them before they set foot in the hotel, and when they pay their bill there is no need for them to put their hands into their pockets to tip anybody. Although the rule against tipping is rigidly enforced by the management there have been visitors who have insisted upon offering gratuities. In order to protect the servants from the temptation the management has had to request these visitors either to abide by the regulations or to seek accommodation elsewhere.

The management has had no difficulty in securing plenty of waiters and chamber maids, despite the fact that they receive no tips. CAFE DE L'OPERA IN NEW HANDS.
