The Oiled Street. Wayne Herald: The policy of oiling streets and roads to lay dust and improve them for travel is being considered favorably by several towns in this part of the state. West Point has decided to experiment with the use of oil on its streets and on roads leading to the town. Norfolk proposes to do some oiling of the streets, and Hartington is considering a similar move. It is said oiled streets are equal to streets paved with asphalt and that the expense is only half what street sprinkling costs for one year. An Omaha representative of the Standard Oil company addressed the business men of Hartington on the subject recently, explaining that the cost of such oiling, including an attachment for the city's street sprinkler, would be $3.50 for a twenty-five-foot lot. It is not kerosene or crude oil, but is known as asphaltum oil, which, when set, will withstand all kinds of travel.

Hunter is high in his praise of this class. One-third of the entire class received averages above 90. A Hospital is Possible. Norfolk, Neb., May 2.—Editor News: I have noted with interest the editorials and items which have appeared in The News from time to time concerning the need of a hospital in Norfolk. That such a need exists is quite apparent to everyone who has given the slightest thought to the subject.

However, the hospital question is a many-sided one. It is recognized by all who have looked into it that the securing of a suitable building is not by any means the most difficult part of the undertaking. It should not be an especially hard task to secure a site and erect a building. That can be done at an outside cost of about $10,000 for a thoroughly modern, fire proof structure of a size adequate to care for the demands of Norfolk and its contributing territory. It is simply a question of raising the money and, considering Norfolk's ability in the line of public spirited enterprise, there should really be no question about it when the crying need for such an institution is properly put before the people.

Problem is Maintenance. But the real difficulty lies in the problems of maintenance and direction after the hospital has been erected. Private hospitals, that is, those owned or directed by individuals, whether physicians or others, require for their success peculiar conditions which are, to say the least, very exceptional and do not exist here. Lacking these exceptional conditions, the public hospital is the only one which has any prospect of continued success. The public hospital owned or directed by the city or county has many disadvantages which are apparent. The care of the sick is something which should be kept out of politics. On the other hand, the care of the sick is peculiarly within the province of religion, and that is why hospitals which are owned or directed by churches are the most successful under ordinary conditions. The Episcopal church, in common with most other religious bodies, maintains hospitals in many places. St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, and Clarkson Memorial hospital, Omaha, are two which are doubtless well known to most of your readers. A hospital along lines similar to these, though of course of less size, can be had in Norfolk if it is wanted here.

If the comparatively small amount required to erect a building can be subscribed and a suitable site secured, an association could be formed and regularly incorporated, to consist of the bishop of the diocese of Nebraska, the chancellor of the diocese, the clergyman in charge of Trinity church, Norfolk, and two other Norfolk people who need not necessarily be members of the Episcopal church. This association would erect a two-story and basement hospital building, about 40 by 60 feet, containing twenty beds for convalescents, dining room, nurses' and patients' private rooms, etc., as nearly fireproof as possible, and provide it with the most modern equipment made. The association will take title to the property and assume its general oversight, as well as its future maintenance.

For No Other Purpose. It will be specified that the building is to be used as a church hospital and for no other purpose, and that any profits accruing from its operation shall be used for the hospital and that none of them shall be diverted to any other use. The active management of the institution would be given to a thoroughly well trained, experienced graduate nurse, employed by and responsible to the association. This nurse would be given the title of matron or superintendent and would have such assistance as might be necessary. No physician would be employed by the hospital in any capacity, and all physicians would be on the same standing there. The hospital would be open to all physicians to bring patients there and they might send special nurses with their cases if they desired. All physicians of Norfolk would be asked to join the hospital staff and to serve, in turn, as house physicians.

Charges Would Be Low. Under this plan charges would be made as low as operating expenses would permit. It is necessary that there be some profit in order to provide a reserve fund for such times as the income is not sufficient to meet expenses. Any profit above this reserve would be used to pay the expenses of worthy indigent patients. The idea would not be to make money but to provide hospital accommodations for all at the lowest possible cost and without any cost to those who are unable to pay.

This would be a public hospital, not a private one. While it would be under the care of the Episcopal church and all responsibility for its maintenance would be assumed by that church, its policy would not in any sense be narrow or sectarian. Its aim would be philanthropic, not money making. Its management would be in safe and experienced hands, similar to that of Clarkson Memorial hospital, Omaha, which has been owned and maintained by the Episcopal church for years along the same plan. Its future would be assured.

It's Up to Norfolk. It is now in Norfolk to try to raise the money to build this hospital. That part of it is up to the citizens of Norfolk, if they want the hospital. I would, however, suggest that the Commercial club would seem to be the proper agency through which this plan might be developed and I would be very glad to meet with them or their directors, at their convenience, and explain the plan more in detail or give them the benefit of the investigations I have made along this line. In any event, whether this plan or some other be adopted, Norfolk needs a hospital and needs it now.

Sincerely yours,
Dana C. Colegrove,
Priest-in-Charge, Trinity Church.

Directors of the Commercial club were shown Mr. Colegrove's letter at their meeting last night and they were enthusiastically in favor of the plan. They endorsed it and declared that the proposition should be accepted, if the money necessary to furnish the building could be raised.

School Board Reorganized. The board of education was reorganized last night and all old officers were re-elected as follows: A. H. Viele, president of the sixth grade; H. C. Matran, secretary. Miss Amy Leigh Payne was re-elected principal of the high school; Miss Nellie Putney, teacher of Latin; Miss Fannie Conkling, history and normal training; Miss Mabel R. McVeigh, German.

New teachers elected last night were: Miss Grace E. Roper, Whitehall, Mont., teacher of English, high school; Benjamin Bedell, Schuyler, teacher of science, high school; Miss Linda Winter, Edgewater; Miss Rosella Cole, seventh and eighth grades; Mrs. Mina Perrine, Sioux, Neb., fourth and fifth grades.

Miss Pearl Sewell in the high school and Mr. Corning of the sixth grade, Lincoln school, both have resigned. The resignation of Superintendent F. W. Hunter was accepted with regret on the part of the board of education. A motion was passed extending to Mr. Hunter the best wishes and congratulations of the board for his promotion.

Mr. Hunter's resignation was accepted in order that I may accept the principal ship of the University School of Agriculture at Lincoln, to which position I was recently elected by the board of regents.

Anticipating the acceptance of my resignation, let me say that it is with much regret that I sever my connection with the members of the board of education of our schools. The relationship between the schools and the people of Norfolk. The three years just closing have been the most pleasant and satisfactory of my life as a superintendent of schools, and the breaking of these ties is a matter of real pain to me.

For whatever may have been accomplished during the past three years, I want to thank first the members of the board, because at all times they have been most staunchly loyal to the school organization and its best interests, and because, too, of the attitude of good will and support that have at all times been so manifest toward the corps of teachers and myself. I feel, too, a deep obligation to the patrons of our schools. The relationship between the schools and the great body of school patrons has at all times been most cordial and pleasant, and it has been only through the loyal support and co-operation of the great body of the school constituency that anything may have been accomplished for the future of Norfolk.

In parting from you and the Norfolk schools and their patrons, let me wish for you all and for Norfolk's young people the very best future that may come to any one, and let me prophesy that with the same staunch public sentiment for the best and highest ideals for the schools which has been their support during my administration, and with the same road minded spirit of conservative conservatism, which has always characterized your own policies, with these guarantees of the future of Norfolk's children, they will some day build a Norfolk greater and better even than the Norfolk of today could possibly picture.

Most sincerely and cordially yours,
Fred M. Hunter.
