WHAT WITTEN SAYS. About 200 Claims in First and 600 in Second Class, He Says.

Omaha, Nov. 4.—Persons who drew numbers in the recent land opening in Bennett and Mellette counties, South Dakota, need not be alarmed over the reports that the state of North Dakota is to have all of the first class land for schools, according to a statement by Judge James W. Witten, superintendent of the land opening, who passed through Omaha on his way back to Washington.

"The state is entitled to sections 16 and 36 in each township, and there are about thirty townships, which gives the state about sixty sections of land, scattered throughout the thirty townships opened, without regard to the quality of the land. The only power of choice possessed by the state is in cases where parts of sections 16 or 36 in a township have been allotted to Indians, in which case the state may select, in other parts of the same township, an area equal to that so allotted to Indians in the state's two sections of the township. There is comparatively little land in the state's townships allotted to Indians. I do not know just what percent, but it is very small and the fact that the deficiency in the state's sections must be supplied from the same township in each case makes it impossible for the state to concentrate on the best land of the opening.

"There are about 150 to 200 claims of the best class, and about 600 in the second class. I should say there are about 1,200 or more worth filing on. There were over 53,000 registrations."

Judge Witten declared that the fact was published in advance and sent out with all circulars and other information that there would be certain reservations and withdrawals which would reduce the area to be opened somewhat from the figures given in advance. The extent to which the area would be reduced could not be foretold, he said.

JOKES OF HALLOWEEN. The Night Resulted in a Number of Them at Neligh.

Neligh, Neb., Nov. 4.—Special to The News: On account of the extra precautions taken by the city officials in supplying special police in automobiles on the night of Halloween, very little damage was done to property, and aside from giving the windows on the business streets a thorough soaping, it was probably the most quiet night experienced in Neligh for several years.

There were some good jokes played, however, that were intended to have been kept from the public, but these leaked out and the laugh has been on those interested. All the public buildings had special watchmen, and Ed. Getchell was assigned the job to see that no damage was attempted at the Second ward school building. During the course of the evening a crowd of young men concluded to visit Mr. Getchell, who received them cordially, entertaining them with stories, and the boys in turn rendered several selections from the Gospel hymns. During the song service one of the young men drew away from the crowd and called up the police, stating that the watchman had been bound and gagged and that a rough house was in progress.

Chief of Police Nichols and Night Officer Jackson made the hurry call in an automobile, and upon arriving at the school building and being admitted found Mr. Getchell surrounded by the boys and all singing: "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." It goes without saying that the officers departed without making any arrest.

One of the same crowd telephoned George Fletcher, county treasurer, that his son Harold had been arrested and was in jail. Mr. Fletcher told the informant that if his boy did something that caused him to be placed in jail he considered it proper and just. It was the plan of the boys to get Mr. Fletcher to walk down town, but this failed. They were more successful in the next attempt.

The telephone at the residence of William Wolfe started ringing furiously, and the head of the household answered. The person at the other end of the line informed Mr. Wolfe that he was Wellington McConnell, and stated that his son Alexander was in jail. Although Mr. Wolfe had been confined to his home for a couple of days on account of sickness, he immediately prepared to get down town to the business district as soon as possible and ascertain the cause why his son should be held in the county bastille. The first person he met on his way down town was McConnell, who stated that Mr. Wolfe was so badly rattled that he could with difficulty make clear his statements, and all of his remarks were a complete puzzle to "Mack." The joke was soon discovered, and the day following the cigars were passed by the one receiving the telephone message.

A couple of weeks ago the old barn in the rear of the office owned by N. B. Switzer and now occupied by the M. J. Romig Printing company, was torn down. Yesterday the old hay and rubbish was removed by Wylie Hoskinson, who found the pocketbook.
