BEELS FILES FOR PRIMARY.

Norfolk Man, Twice Defeated, Seeks

Third Nomination. Madison, Neb., Jan. 18 - Special to The News: Geo. Beeles of Norfolk was in Madison yesterday, primarily to file for the nomination as representative from Madison county subject to the will of the republican primary, and incidentally to talk up his candidacy. Mr. Beels although twice nominated and defeated for representative is more enthusiastic than ever, believing that the third trial will result in his election, and urging as reasons that conditions and issues which were responsible for his defeat in 1910 have sufficiently changed to justify such hopes. People in general think it is too early to take much notice of the matter, and there is little if any sentiment other than of a noncommittal character at this time.

The following is Mr. Beels' state ment:

In consenting again to file for the epublican nomination as a candidate or the office of representative from Madison county to the legislature of Nebraska, we make no apology in the E. E. SHEEHAN IN SIOUX CITY.

Voice Still Husky But Gives Evidence of Wonderful Tenor Quality Although still in husky voice as the result of the severe cold which prevented his singing here, Joseph F Sheehan was able to sing comparatively well at Sioux City the night after his Norfolk appearance. Offenbach's fantastic light opera. "The Love Tales of Hoffmann," presented by the Shehan English Opera company at the New Grand theater last evening, won the enthusiastic favor of Sioux City's theater goers and music lovers. Sumptuous settings, a company whose musical ensemble is far above the average, and Mr. Sheehan formed an exceedingly attractive offering. Like all of Offenbach's compositions. this opera is replete with melodies and pictures that make an appeal to the popular ear. Around the motif of the barcarole, "O. Lovely Night," are grouped variations and melodies, all with the plaintive and alluring strain of that familiar air. Although his voice was husky as the result of a severe cold, Mr. Sheehan gave evidence of the wonderful tenor voice that has placed him in the front rank of English speaking singers. The other members of the company were in splendid voice, however, and through their efforts the presentation of the opera was not so greatly impaired. Miss Marion Walker, in the role of Niclausse, the friend of Hoffmann, showed to advantage with her richly colored contralto voice. Miss Gladys Caldwell, who interpreted the role of the mechanical doll in the second act and that of Antonio, the young singer for her mimicry and for the fervor in the two characterizations. Charles Swickard, whose translation in the third, was heartily applauded from the French of Barbier and Ofthe opera, displayed considerable versatility in the three roles he assumed. He possesses a voice of unusual timbre, equally good in the role of the Hebrew mountebank, Coppelius, Dappertutto, the officer, and Dr. Miracle, the evil genius of the third act.

Francis J. Tyler and W. J. Jorgenon are also cast for important singing roles in which they appeared to al, equity; sheriff sale and deed or advantage. The support given by the remainder of the large company was excellent.
