Contrary to the general rule, the expected has happened. Governor Forney last evening appointed Ex-Senator W. V. Allen as judge of this district to fill the vacancy caused by the election of John S. Robinson as congressman. Mr. Allen will at once enter upon his duties and be ready to serve in his judicial capacity at the Madison terms of court which begins next Monday.

Some days ago THE NEWS stated that one of the first duties of Congressman Robinson would be the appointment of a West Point cadet. Information since received shows this paper to have been misinformed. There will be no vacancy at West Point for more than a year but there will be an appointment made very soon to the naval academy at Annapolis. The Madison Reporter says that there will be a competitive examination probably at Norfolk within a few weeks. Here is a chance for prospective Deweys to climb onto the first round of the ladder of fame.

A story of marital infelicity is wafted this way from the borders of the quiet village of Hoskins. A man and his wife living there didn't get along happily together and last Friday the woman in the case slid out of town on the south bound train. It was soon found that another man went with her. Information as to whether he was handsomer or not, has not been received. The agitated husband, sent telegrams hither and yon for the arrest of the wayward couple. They were apprehended at North Bend and brought back to Hoskins and yesterday brought before Justice Zieman. The county attorney of Wayne dismissed the case, the defendants paying the costs. It is understood that the wife is in Norfolk today on her way south again, this time alone. She declares that she has not been guilty of improper conduct, the man merely accompanying her as a friend, and that her husband is the party who is at fault.

A GROWING INDUSTRY.

Beet Sugar Factories Springing Up Everywhere.

MILLIONS ARE BEING INVESTED.

A Graphic and Interesting Resume of What Has Already Been Accomplished, With the Prospects of Further and Immediate Development—A Great Field of Action Scarcely Yet Touched.

Readers of THE NEWS are alive to the growth and development that is taking place in this country along all lines. Naturally, however, their attention is drawn most particularly to any industry in which they themselves have shared and of which they know something definite.

The beet sugar industry, while it is familiar because of the planting of the Oxnard beet sugar factory at this place some years ago, is just beginning to attract capital, on any large scale. The article which is copied below from one of the ablest business journals of the country tells in a concise and clear way, the story of what is going on in this department at the present time.

The development in this new industry is astonishing even to those who are in the business, and to all others a brief statement of it will prove a revelation. One beet sugar factory at Rome, N. Y., is completing its second campaign very successfully. The beet sugar mill at Binghamton, N. Y., is having a successful first campaign, and others are projected in central and western New York. So remarkable has been the success of the first campaign of the Michigan Sugar Company at Bay City, Mich., that that mill is to double its capacity, and the same people are building another factory near by. A third company is putting up a large factory at West Bay City, Mich., and other large enterprises are projected at Benton Harbor, Grand Haven and other Michigan points. At Rochester, Mich., the Detroit Sugar Company, composed of the most substantial capitalists of that city, contracted for a 500-ton mill, which the Oxnards are to make a model of perfection. While Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana are not "booming" beet sugar quite as industriously as is Michigan with its bounty, they are deeply interested. Illinois has a large beet sugar mill now being equipped at Pekin for the 1899 crop, and another will doubtless be constructed at Ottawa, Ill.

The pioneer beet sugar factory in Wisconsin did not run simply because of lack of beets sufficiently rich in quantity and quality of sugar. The Northwestern Beet Sugar company is now letting contracts for a plant at Merrillan, Wis., for which several thousand acres of beets will be required for the 1899 crop. In Iowa, South Dakota and certain sections of Kansas the interest is very keen. The two well-established beet sugar factories in Nebraska have had a favorable season, and their acreage for 1899 will probably be double that of any previous season. A million dollars of Boston's money is going into a model beet sugar factory near Ames, Neb., in connection with the Standard Cattle Company. Some of the most prominent and wealthiest of Boston's financiers are interested in this proposition, which, because of the remarkably favorable locality and experienced management, promises to be one most profitable of all the beet sugar enterprises. A good deal of New England money that has recently been made in copper stock will be invested in the beet sugar industry at various western points. In Colorado a sugar mill of 800 tons daily capacity has been contracted for, to be located at Grand Junction, in the western part of the state, and another large mill is pretty certain to be built at Pueblo, Col. Several others are wanted in the state. The beet sugar factory at Lehi has just completed its eighth successive campaign with brilliant success, from both the manufacturing and agricultural standpoints. The new mill at Ogden, Utah, has also wound up its first season. The beet sugar factory at Eddy, N.M., in the Pecos valley, is doing fairly well, and others are contemplated in New Mexico and Arizona. One or more beet sugar factory enterprises are being agitated for Wyoming, South Dakota, Montana and Idaho.

On the Pacific coast this industry has assumed large proportions. The biggest beet sugar factory in the world, located in the Salinas valley, California, has a capacity of 3,000 tons of beets per day, and with the neighboring factory at Watsonville will consume the product of nearly 50,000 acres of beets each year. In fact, these two mills alone pay the farmers upward of $2,500,000 every year for this new crop. The historic sugar mill at Alvarado, which has been running off and on for twenty-five years, has of late been so successful that its capacity has been doubled, and the same management are interested in the new mill of the Union Sugar Company, near Santa Maria, which will have a capacity of 1,000 tons of beets per day. The great beet sugar plant at Chino, San Bernardino county, Cal., has completed its eighth season and is contracting for thousands of acres of beets of the 1899 crop, having a capacity of 1,000 tons daily. Its 1897 campaign was extraordinarily profitable. The Los Alamitos sugar house is to double its capacity, from 350 to 700 tons of beets per day of 24 hours. Perhaps the most model establishment of its kind in the world is the new 2,000-ton plant of the Pacific Sugar company at the new town of Oxnard, Ventura county, Cal. It represents an investment of $2,000,000, and a large town is building up about it. The capacity, now 1,000 tons of beets per day, will be increased to 2,000 tons, requiring 20,000 acres of beets each year.

So much for a beginning in our domestic beet sugar industry. With a favorable season these domestic sugar mills ought to produce 300,000 tons of sugar in 1899.—Herbert Myrick, in Bradstreet's.

THE STANTON WEDDING.

Marriage of Mr. Alfred S. Hope and Miss Lillian Gerecke—Witnessed by Many Friends.

The large party of Norfolk friends who were at the home of Wm. Gerecke of Stanton yesterday returned in the evening and reported a very delightful occasion. They were invited to witness the nuptials of Mr. Alfred S. Hope and Miss Lillian Gerecke.

At four o'clock, in the parlors of the handsome home, charmingly decorated for the occasion and presided by Miss Robinet Bear, who carried the ring, beneath a canopy of smilax the happy pair made their marriage vows. Rev. Joseph Parker of this city was the officiating clergyman. Congratulations by the large number of friends present were extended and refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hope returned to Norfolk with their friends of this city and were entertained in the evening by Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Rainbolt. A few acquaintances and friends gathered at the Rainbolt residence in the evening to extend greetings to the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Hope registered at the Oxnard for the night and this morning left over the U. P. for Columbus.

Mr. Hope is at present connected with Bradstreet's Commercial agency at Omaha but it is understood that he will soon move to St. Louis and accept a similar position there.

The young people carry with them to their new home the best wishes of a large circle of friends, who will hope for them all the happiness and success that home life can bring.

Increasing Real Estate Transfers Indicate Trade Winds.

NORFOLK'S PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN.

Stiffening Prices for Farm Lands Supplemented by Marked Improvements in Town Property—Good Work of Business Men's Association—Growth of City Inevitable—It Will be Sure and Steady.

Attention is called to the increasing number of real estate transfers that are recorded in the columns of THE NEWS recently, day by day. They form a barometer of existing conditions that cannot be ignored and is of deep significance. Real estate is already moving, at advancing prices, in Norfolk and vicinity and this is likely to continue. Dealers in dirt all testify that calls for lands are more numerous than they have been for years and that "snaps" are very much scarcer than they were a year ago.

As to Norfolk a keen business man of long residence in this city remarked the other day that he could see a noticeable improvement in the condition of property here. Rents are firm, quickly taken and likely to go higher. Owners of city property are more tenacious of retaining their grip on what they have and instead of wanting to let go are beginning to secure more. Nor is this to be wondered at. There is good and substantial foundation for all this. In common with the rest of the country, Norfolk passed through the sweat box. It is true that values never were depressed here as they were in many places, yet the surplus "water" was all squeezed out. But the tide has turned. Farmers are getting good prices for their produce. Northern Nebraska is filling up with settlers, and Norfolk is sure to receive large benefit from it all. Architect Stitt says that he has already plans for a large number of dwellings to be erected in the spring and the number is constantly growing. Houses are in demand and the increase of new families locating here is one of the signs of the times.

The location of the site for a government building is soon to be made, and within a year or two a substantial structure on one of the business corners will loom up, the possession of Uncle Samuel. The agitation and interest of the solid business men of the city in the erection of an opera house, the prospect of the building of the Yankton & Norfolk railroad this season, the project for the establishment of a state normal school here, all indicate the latent possibilities of the city and the firm faith of conservative men who are not in the habit of throwing money to the birds.

The work of the Business Men's association in behalf of local interests is worthy of commendation. Here citizens of all shades of opinion, different political complexion and various social tastes have disregarded all minor considerations and risen to the needs and benefits that accrue from a common citizenship and a broad minded public spirit.

Norfolk is at the beginning of a new and substantial era of development. There will be no "boom." Nobody wants it. There will be growth. It is likely to be much more decided than people are apt to think. At least it will be sure and healthy. How large a growth it has depends most largely on the attitude of its own citizens. Heaven does about the same by cities as it does by individuals—it helps those most who are willing to help themselves. It is because this is true—and because of the enterprise and energy that is being displayed by the business forces of Norfolk that THE NEWS has unbounded confidence in the future of this city.

Its location calls for growth. Outsiders are sure to recognize it. Capital will seek investment here if given the glad hand. It will be.

The harmony and aggressiveness manifested in behalf of Norfolk's interests by Norfolk's citizens presages great accomplishments and "no mean city."

Stand up for Norfolk! It's a good town—push it along and watch it grow!
