ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

Norfolk Weekly News Reduced to $1 a Year for Cash in Advance.

PREMIUM TO EVERY SUBSCRIBER

Opportunity for Young Men and Women, Boys and Girls to Make Money.

During the 18 years that THE NORFOLK WEEKLY NEWS has been published no subscriber has ever received it for less than $1.50 per year. This price has been maintained in the face of cheaper competition, because it has always been conceded that THE NEWS is the best weekly paper published in this section of the state, being printed all at home and giving later telegraphic news and recording more local events than any other. It has always been well worth the price asked for it and will continue to steadily improve in all its varied departments in the future. But in response to the large class of people who desire to pay in advance we have decided to make the following

SPECIAL OFFER:

To every subscriber who will pay $1.00 in advance THE NEWS will be sent for one year.

To every old subscriber who will pay up all arrearages to date and $1.00 in advance, THE NEWS will be sent for one year.

Every subscriber who pays one year in advance will be presented with a copy of Kendall's Perfected Receipt Book, admitted to be the best cook book on the market, containing besides suggestions as to the care of the sick, recipes for the ailments of stock, etc., which are invaluable on any farm and in any household. Those who cannot call at THE NEWS office for the book will include 5 cents extra for postage.

Any subscriber, or member of the family of a subscriber, who secures for us one or more new cash in advance subscriptions, will be paid 25 cents for each new name and $1.00 which they may send to this office.

Those who have paid in advance at the regular rate will be credited the additional time at the new rate. Those who do not pay in advance will continue to be charged the old rate of $1.50 per year.

This special offer will continue until April 1, unless sooner withdrawn, which we reserve the right to do. Address all communications to readers of THE NEWS can take it for what it is worth but they will be interested in the following clipping taken from the Omaha Bee: "There are renewed rumors afloat that the Burlington will extend its line from Schuyler to Norfolk in the near future. The people of the latter city have been urging the road to make this extension for some time, but up to the present there has been a careful avoidance of encroaching upon Elkhorn territory. It is about ninety miles across from Schuyler to Norfolk, and a line between the two points would tap some of the best country in Nebraska. While it is possible the road may be built at some time, the officers of the road will not commit themselves at this time. If the line from Norfolk to Yankton should ever be built, it would not be much of a guess that Norfolk's desire to be connected with Schuyler would be gratified."

Nothing wins admiration for a man more than his enthusiastic devotion to the country where he has made his home. It is the energy, patience and success of the men who came to Nebraska a quarter of a century ago that is the foundation of the present growing prosperity. They have grown to love the soil, climate and conditions of life here and that entitles a desire in others to locate here. This however is true not only of Nebraska but in every portion of a common union. This is brought to mind by a letter which lies on the desk of the writer just received from a friend who lives near Carson, Nevada. It sounds good because the man loves his home and his business is located there. As it contains information of wide interest a portion of it is quoted for the benefit of THE NEWS readers: "If you should make a trip west don't give Nevada the go-by because there is nothing to be seen along the line of the railroad. If you will visit Carson Valley the latter part of June or the first of July, I will hitch up 'Old Dick,' the family thoroughbred, and show you crops of hay, grain, alfalfa, fruits and vegetables that neither South Dakota or Nebraska can produce. California raises tremendous crops of fruit and vegetables and ships heavily through this state to the east and to the north and south, but buys largely of Nevada for home consumption, paying on an average 70 cents per hundred, freight, and 25 per cent higher price than she receives for her own products. Race horse men in New York, Kentucky and other states buy Nevada hay for their horses, because raised and cured in a dry climate it is bright and clean and exceedingly nutritious. It is not bleached out and contains all its original strength. A horse will do as well on Nevada hay alone as he will on both hay and grain produced in a climate where irrigation is unnecessary. 'Old Dick' never saw any grain, but is fat and round and goes eight miles an hour. In fact any common driving horse here travels from six to eight miles an hour, the roads being good nearly all the year round. And if I were to tell you about our climate, pure air and water and the effect on man and beast, you would have to lay off a week to read it, so I will not start in."

The meeting adjourned until 2 p. m., March 28th, at Sessions & Bell's.

"The boy who stays on the farm must not be made to feel that it is a disgrace for him to stay there" declared Governor Shaw in an address before the Iowa State Agricultural society the other day. "I have always advised boys to stick to the farm to get their first $500, for a boy will get it quicker there than anywhere else. Start two boys out, one on the farm and the other in town and the boy on the farm will have $500, first. I don't mean that every boy should stay on a farm always, but it is a good place to make a start. In my country I can pick out thirty farmers who are worth more than thirty business men in the town, and the average condition of the farmer is much above that of the town men. The farmers must get over the idea that they are looked down upon by the townspeople for they are not and should not be. There is no reason for them to think they are looked down upon for the business man in town realizes fully the importance of the farmer to him."

AT NORFOLK IN 1892.

A Reminiscence of Congressman W. L. Greene.

HIS SPEECH IN THE BIG RINK.

A Washington Correspondent Tells About It. Greene's Immense Power as a Stump Speaker. The Effect of His Talk on Madison County Voters. Not Appreciated in Congress.

The death of Congressman William L. Green of the Sixth Nebraska district, at Omaha recently, has called forth many tributes to his power as an orator and his brilliancy as a man. The following sketch from the Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier Journal will be noted with much interest by News readers both because of its keen analysis of Greene's powers but as well because of its local bearing:

"He was a very forceful man, and a delightful demagogue. I shall never forget the first time I saw him. It was in northern Nebraska late in the month of October, 1892. I believe he was the populist candidate for attorney general. I was stopping in a town of about 5,000 population—Norfolk—and one night Editor Rosewater, of Omaha, came into town. He was stumping the state for Harrison. He had an eminently respectable audience. Several clergymen were there, several bankers were there, the leading lawyers were there, the leading merchants were there. Put a pen in his list, and Mr. Rosewater is a very considerable man; but Mr. Rosewater has no business on the stump. His speech was as dry as one of old Granny Blair's. There was no applause, and every man in the audience—and woman too, for in the west, the gentler sex is fond of politics—was glad when he concluded his two hours' discourse. The next night Greene came in and he came with his mouth wide open. The weather was bitter cold but the rink was crowded. A great, big upright cylinder stove in the center of the auditorium was redhot, and the farmers of Madison county who had come to the meeting, shed their fur overcoats, because of the heat of the room. A glee club, led by a gigantic fellow in a fur coat, reaching from head to heels, opened the proceedings. When the singers had keyed the audience to the proper pitch, Greene came on deck and spoke three hours. And such a speech! He proved conclusively that the American farmer was the most abject serf on the footstool, and that nothing was left to him but to choose between starvation and suicide. Starvation was good in light of the fact that there was a car famine in the yards of both the railroad lines penetrating Madison county—a famine due to the prolific harvests of grain of the season just past and the immense flocks of cattle and sheep and countless droves of swine fattened for market in that region. There was no crime he did not charge upon the republican party, and from the cheering that greeted him it was pretty evident that he convicted it on every count so far as that audience was concerned. Greene had the build of an orator—a bust like John Young Brown's and a neck like John L. Sullivan's. His was a deep bass voice and words poured out of his mouth like soap suds out of a wash tub. He aspirated words after a fashion that would have made the fortune of an actor. On the stump he was simply a holy terror. I doubt if Senator Thurston would have had any business tackling him before an audience of Nebraska farmers. But Greene was a failure in congress. He did not lack for opportunity. No other new member spoke so frequently as he, unless it was John Wesley Gaines, of Tennessee, or Charles Kennedy Wheeler, of Kentucky. Greene loved to speak and if congress were what the stump is out in Nebraska Greene would have been a rouser."
