The weather has been somewhat warm the past few days but has lacked several degrees of reaching the high record mark for the season.

A large load of hay upset yesterday in front of the residence of C. S. Bridge on Main street. It was reloaded and hauled away this morning.

Just before the parade the merchants enjoyed a big rush of trade and have been having a very good business during the greater part of the day.

The livery barns were not able to accommodate nearly all of the teams in town, the runner being taken care of in the yards and on vacant lots.

The first contract to be supplied the circus was the hay and straw, seven loads of the former and two loads of the latter being placed on the grounds yesterday.

The weather was quite favorable for show day, especially the morning, which dawned beautifully, giving the country people no excuse for not starting to town.

The hotels are full of guests. A man was heard complaining, this morning, that he was compelled to walk the streets all night because he couldn't find sleeping accommodations.

Among the first tents to be erected on the show grounds was the blacksmith and horseshoeing tent and the circus artisans in this line were soon busy looking after the wants of horses and making needed repairs to circus property.

Orders were issued from the governor's office at Lincoln yesterday assembling the Nebraska National Guard in camp of instruction on August 20, place to be designated in future order. It is proposed to give the men and officers 50 per cent of the per diem and issue vouchers for the advance. The camp, if held of which there is yet some question, will be for five days. It will be named after the late Captain Lee Forby, of company G, Omaha.

The trip to Salt Lake City or the Pacific coast via Salt Lake City by way of the Rio Grande Western Railway in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande or Colorado Midland roads is the grandest in America. No European trip of equal length can compare with it in grandeur of scenery or wealth of novel interest. Then Salt Lake City itself is a most quaint and picturesque place and well worth the journey to see. Its Mormon temple, tabernacle, tithing office and church institutions; its hot and warm sulphur springs within the city limits; its delightfully temperate sunny climate and its Great Salt Lake—deader and denser than the Dead Sea in Palestine—are but a few features of Salt Lake City's countless attractions. There are parks, drives, canyons and beautiful outlying mountain and lake resorts. Imagine, if you can, a bath in salt water, a mile above sea level and in water in which the human body cannot sink. Inquire of your nearest ticket agent for low tourist rates to Salt Lake City or write for information and copy of "Salt Lake City—the City of the Saints" to Geo. W. Heintz, General Passenger Agent, Salt Lake City.

The American Beet Sugar company's book will be open from August 1st to 15th, inclusive, to receive applications for positions during the coming campaign. Apply at company's office.

A RINGLING SHOW DAY

Crowds of Delighted People in Norfolk.

EVERYTHING WAS MAGNIFICENT.

A Curtained Account of What the People Saw—Streets Were Crowded During the Parade—Short History of the Ringling Brothers' Efforts in the Show Line.

Norfolk is a good show town, especially for Ringling Bros. It hardly appears necessary for the advertising cars to distribute their extensive and exhaustive advertising matter, when the name "Ringling" appears to be sufficient. The people here are acquainted with the show. They seem to feel a sort of individual pride in the brothers' success. They have met so often that they feel almost like old friends. They have learned to know that when Ringlings make a date to exhibit here they will see something good and they have never been disappointed. Ringlings seem to have learned also that Norfolk has a friendly feeling toward them and they never appear in contingent territory but that one of their dates are made in Norfolk. They have learned to expect a good crowd in Norfolk, of which people from the country and surrounding towns form no small part. It is a genuine pleasure to have them come and the people feel, somehow, that they are glad to come.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the crowds commenced assembling here early this morning and have kept it up all day, until the old town has assumed a regular holiday appearance. They came in by special excursion and by team from miles around, and the streets, especially during the parade, were thronged with people, from whom the candy, peanut, lemonade and ice cream merchants have gathered a splendid harvest of small coin, while the regular merchants have by no means been allowed to doze.

It has been a successful day for the show and the town, while the crowds have reaped the pleasure—the pleasure, almost of a lifetime, because the circus has improved, and improved wonderfully, so that there seems to be no chance of further additions for the pleasure and profit of its patrons.

The circus arrived from Sioux City at an early hour this morning and began the task—which to the novice appeared almost insurmountable—of unloading the cars; but it was accomplished in an incredibly short space of time. The materials for the tents, the magnificent cars and wagons, the animals and the thousand and one lesser appurtenances to a great show, were successfully transferred from the train, which came in in three sections, to the grounds, the work being watched by a vast number of interested spectators, who were almost as well pleased as in seeing the show itself.

The work of unloading had scarcely begun until the grounds at the Olney pasture were assailed by a small army of canvasmen, stake drivers and other workmen, and under their scientific manipulation the vast tents soon assumed shape, springing up like immense fleecy clouds above the horizon. It was a magnificent spectacle and well worthy anyone's attention. The menagerie, eating and horse tents were the first erected, as the good showman is a good feeder and the emptiness of his employes and animals is carefully and abundantly filled as the first prerequisite to good, faithful duty. The vast stores of hay, grain, vegetables, meats and other provisions, that were safely and expeditiously stowed away where they would do the most good would astonish any hotel.

There appears to be no rest for any employe of a show, and while the finishing touches were being put on the tents the larger part of the working army was transferred to getting the parade in readiness. The canvas coverings of the magnificent cars were removed, splendid banners were unfurled and placed, the horses were harnessed and caparisoned and promptly at the hour set—10 o'clock—the magnificent and imposing spectacle was under way.

It was conveniently divided into sections and passed through the crowded streets all too soon to suit the gaping throng which would have delighted to watch its magnificence and hear its music and other noises all day long. But there must be no lagging on the part of those constituting the displays as their duties for the day are fairly begun. It was an imposing affair which words are inadequate to describe and the most one could say was "wonderful!" "magnificent!" and other expressions indicating amazement, approval and delight.

Among the novel features of the procession was a set of cathedral bells which rang out popular airs as the line moved. Another novelty, striking and beautiful, was an excellent band of musicians mounted on white horses. In striking contrast to this organization Spader Johnson's clown band followed, filling the air with a fog of discords. The unique gang of musical malaprops is warranted to play all around a piece of music without once hitting the keys. Music was also furnished by a military band, a callopo and a Turkish orchestra. The Ringlings were generous in the display of their wild animals. Many cages were thrown open and their contents furnished the spectators a practical study in animal history.

The Ringlings have 25 elephants, just one-half those in America and the largest herd in captivity. Fifteen of these monsters walked in the parade, each hanging his trunk on the tail of the one in front of him.

Never before have so many beautiful horses been seen in Norfolk and as to the parade and performance they excelled those of any other circus on the road.

The parade was followed to the grounds by a vast number of the people, where they witnessed the usual free performance. After this the crowds thinned out for dinner and there was considerable hurry, as many wanted to spend a long time in the menagerie before the afternoon performance commenced, and as soon as the main entrance was opened the crowds began to flock in, until it appeared as though the entire population of the county, and then some, were bent on seeing the show, and by 2 o'clock, the time for the afternoon performance to begin, the seats were well occupied with a staring, frustrated audience. As the Ringlings claim that their circus tent will seat 18,000 people, there must have been nearly if not quite that number present.

The opening act of the performance—"Last days of the Century, or the Light of Liberty," was all that is claimed for it and was unparalleled in spectacular magnificence. It was participated in by nearly all having connection with the show and was a most thrilling and patriotic sight. Types of soldiers from all countries on the globe were represented and the events of several famous battles were reproduced, but of course the soldiers, flags and representations of American achievements captured the hearts of an enthusiastic and patriotic audience.

Following this was the regular circus performance which would require several newspapers and much time and effort to adequately describe. Suffice it to say every individual act was splendid, especially the wonderful performance of the horses, elephants and other animals. The greedy eye of the onlooker was kept constantly alert and active in the impossible endeavor to see everything at once and his only seeming disappointment was that he missed something of interest. However, it was a very well satisfied crowd that came away after the performance was ended. Many who saw it this afternoon will go again tonight and those who were unable to attend the afternoon performance will certainly be on tonight so that another large crowd is assured.

In this connection it is not improbable that a short sketch of the Ringling Brothers as showmen would prove interesting. They early conceived an ambition in their chosen profession and when very young laid their first performance was given under a carpet tent, the admission fee being pins. Their show at that time was not unlike the "shows" given by the kids of the present day, but their ambition was not satisfied with one attempt, and at their next city, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, and Glenwood, Colorado; Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah; on Aug. 2, 1891, they purchased sheeting and made their first real tent. This was all accomplished out of school hours. Their next effort was the exhibition of a "panorama," painted by an artistic neighbor and mounted on rollers. This scheme was shortlived as some larger boys with a bump of destructiveness inordinately developed, destroyed their paraphernalia after they had taken in 37 cents.

The regular circus business proved fascinating, however, and to their next entertainment they charged an admission fee of five cents. They had traded for an old and decrepit Mexican pony which has since proven the forerunner of as magnificent a field of horses as was ever assembled under a company or individual ownership, some of which are priceless. Their parade at that time was a "feature," the music being furnished from a jews harp, a mouth organ, an old army trumpet and a drum. They succeeded in attracting the attention of old as well as young and many adults paid the nickel admission to see the performance and were fully repaid by the ludicrousness of it all.

After this the ambition to own a real circus became deeper in their hearts and they proceeded to perfect themselves as showmen, taking studies in music to start with.

They got acquainted with some of the essentials and organized a concert troupe and their first real entry into the amusement field was made. They suffered stage fright, discouragement and disappointment, but persevered and covered quite a circuit. After a few years of concert work, the troupe becoming more perfect as time passed, the boys found themselves possessed of $1,000 or $1,200 and the old circus fever again struck them, and they proceeded to collect material for a wagon show, making many mistakes and meeting many obstacles. They secured the services of Yankee Robinson, a veteran but somewhat past number showman, and traveled for a time on his reputation with varying fortunes.

Yankee Robinson did not live through their first season and they were thrown back on their own resources but the season ended with brightening prospects and though the proprietors were not yet all out of their "teens" they were no longer boys, either in age or experience, and their next aspiration was to have "the greatest show on earth," which they have now unquestionably attained.

Early in their career they made some reforms and innovations in the show business which, among their competitors, gave them the nickname of a "Sunday school" show. They made war on the grafters, confidence men and fakirs which followed other shows at will and also were the originators of the rule, "No profanity or ribaldry among their employes," and that they did something which met the approval of the people is evidenced by the way other shows have adopted their reforms.

In the year 1888, but 12 years past, they abandoned the wagon method and have since been transported by rail, and the wonderful attractions brought here today on 58 extra large cars is thus seen to be not the outcome of a day's effort, but many long, active, progressive years.

Their show of today would be in vivid contrast with their first effort as a wagon show and it would seem that a reproduction of their first parade would be an instructive and interesting feature in contrast with that of the present day, showing more comprehensively what a magnificent accomplishment has been attained by five ambitious and progressive showmen, whose motto seems to be "Honesty, Candor and Integrity."

Love sick couple that was not in town.

The kid who didn't care anything for the show.

The girl who didn't wear a white or rainbow dress.

The man, woman or child who didn't see the parade.

The fellow who didn't say, "Did you see the elephant?"

The person who isn't more or less foot sore and weary this evening.

The individual who was too hard up to purchase a show ticket.

The fellow who clung to his girl like he would a runaway horse.

The individual who didn't smile at the clown band or the last "font."

The merchant who would talk business when the parade was passing.

The man who got up at 4 o'clock to take the children to see the trains come in, and who almost forgot the children in his hurry to get them there.

The demure lady who wouldn't accompany her husband down to see the train unload, but who was peering around the corner of the barn and finally followed before he was fairly started.
