JENNIE BAXTER: JOURNALIST

BY POBERT BARR.

II.—The Diamonds of the Princess.

After luncheon the princess came to Miss Baxter, who was seated at her desk, and handed her a letter.

"There is an invitation from the Duchess of Chiselhurst for a grand ball she is shortly to give. It is to be a very swell affair, but I don't care enough for such things to go all the way to therefore send her grace my regrets?"

"I will do so at once." At that moment there came a messenger from the prince asking Miss Baxter to meet him in the library. The girl glanced up at the princess. "Have your permission to go?" she said. The princess looked at her steadily fer a moment, just the faintest suspicion of a frown on her fair brow.

"I do not suppose you need my permission." Her highness spoke with slow deliberation. "My husband condescends to take considerable interest in you. mated conversation."

"Had you sufficient interest in our discussion to stop and listen to what we said Princess von Steinheimer?"

"Ah! Now you are becoming insoent, and I must ask you to consider your engagement with me at an end." "Surely you will not dismiss me in that heartless way, princess. I think I am entitled to a month's notice, or is t only a week's ?!

"I will pay you a year's salary or two years', if that will content you. I have no wish to deal harshly with you, but I desire you to leave at once," said the princess, who had little sense of humor and thus thought the girl was in earnest when she asked for notice.

Miss Baxter laughed merrily and replied when she was able to control her mirth. "I do hate to leave the castle just when things were becoming interesting. Still I don't suppose I shall need to go away in spite of your dismissal, for the prince this morning offered me ten times the amount of money you are paying.

"Did he !" "Be assured he did. If you don't believe me, ask him. I told him he was a and few men believe all they hear, so I fear my expression of opinion made little impression on him.'

"I shall not keep you longer from his highness," said the princess, with freezing to meet him, for I know he has the train. something most interesting to tell me. Don't you think yourself, princess, that deeply in love?"

princess left the room. Miss Jennie in another room. jumped to her feet and almost ran to "The young woman," said the prince For Free Medical Advice, sample ing up and down the long room with a and is entirely in her confidence." telegraph message in his hand.

> "You are a most wenderful young woman," he said; "read that."

"I have been told so by more observing men than you. Prince von Steinheimer." said the girl taking the telegram. It was from the manager of the bank in Vienna, and it ran: "Special messenger leaves with package by the Meran express tonight

"Just as I thought," said Miss Jennie. "The diamonds never left the bank. I suppose those idiots of servants which the princess has round her didn't know what they took away from Vienna and what they left. Then, when the diamonds were missing, they completely lost their heads-not that any one in the castie has much wits to spare. I never saw such an incompetent lot.' The prince laughed.

"You think, perhaps, I have not wits enough to see that my wife cares for me. Is that it? Is that why you gave

> The prince regarded her with his most severe expression.

> "Are you not flattering yourself somewhat, young lady?'

"Oh, dear, no! I take it as the reverse of flattering to be supposed that I have any liking for such a ninny as you are. Flattering indeed! And she has haughtily dismissed me, if you please.

"The princess has? What have you been saying to her?" "Oh, I made the most innocent remark, and it was the truth, too, which shows that honesty is not always the best policy. I merely told her that you had offered me ten times the amount of money she is paying me. You needn't jump as if somebody had shot off a gun at your ear. You know you did make such an offer.

"You confounded little mischief maker!" cried the prince in anger. 'Did you tell her what it was for ?'' "No. She did not ask."

"I will thank you to apply the clevsrness you seem to possess to the undoing of the harm you have so light heartedly caused.'

"How can I? I am ordered to leave tonight, when I did so wish to stay and see the diamond denonement. "You are not going tonight. I shall speak to the princess about it if that should be necessary. Your mention of the diamonds reminds me that my respected father-in-law, Mr. Briggs, informs me that a celebrated detective, whom it seems he has engaged-Cadbury Taylor, I think the name is will be here tomorrow to explain the diamond mystery, so you see you have a too jolly for anything. I simply must stay and hear his explanation, for he is a very famous detective, and the conclusions he has arrived at must be most interesting.

In the morning the diamonds arrived per special messenger, who first took a formal receipt for them and then most obsequiously took his departure. By the same train came Mr. Cadbury Taylor, as modest as ever, but giving some indication in his bearing of the importance of the discovery his wonderful system had aided bim in making. He blandly evaded the curiosity of Mr. Briggs and said it would perhaps be better to reveal the secret in the presence of the prince and princess.

"Just what I suspected," muttered Mr. Briggs, who had long been convinced that the prince had stolen the Miss Bexter stood near a window reading an important letter from London which had reached her that morning. The tall, thin detective and the portly Mr. Briggs came in together, the London man bowing gravely to the prince and princess. Mr. Briggs took a seat at the side of the table, but the detective remained standing, looking questioningly at Miss Baxter, but evidently not recognizing her as the lady who had come in upon him "Thank you so much. The detective, apparently unruffled by the discourtesy he met, bowed profoundly toward the prince, cleared his throat and began.

"May I ask your highness," he said, much money you possessed just before you left Vienna?" The lady looked up at him in surprise, but did not answer. "In heaven's name, what has that to do with the loss of the diamonds?" getting once more the better of him. Cadbury Taylor spread out his hands and shrugged his shoulders in protest at the interruption. He spoke with deference, but nevertheless with a touch of reproach in his tone. "I am accustomed to be listened to tringing his clinched flat down on the oak. What did I tell you? I knew it all along. The prince stole the diamonds and in his excitement yanks them out of his pocket and proves it. I said so from the first." "Oh, father, father!" moaned the princess, speaking for the first time. How can you say such a thing? My husband couldn't do a mean action if he tried. The idea of his stealing the diamonds! Not if they were worth a thousand millions and detection impossible. "Come. come," cried Miss Jennie Baxter, stepping energetically forward. "I imagine everybody has had enough of this. Clear out, Mr. Briggs, and take Mr. Taylor with you. I am sure he has not had any breakfast yet, ann he certainly looks hungry. If you hire detectives, Mr. Briggs, you must take care of them. Out you go. The dining room is ever so much more inviting just now than the library, and if you don't see what you want ring for it.

She drove the two speechless men out before her and, closing the door, said to the prince, who was still standing bewildered at having his hand forced in this manner:

"There! Two fools from four leave two. Now, my dears-I'm not going to highness either of you-you are simply two lone people who like each other immensely, yet who are drifting apart through foolish misunderstandings that a few words would put right if either of you had sense enough to speak them. which you haven't, and that's why I'm here to speak them for you. Now, madame, I am ready to swear that the prince has never said anything to me that did not show his deep love for you, and if you had overheard us you would not need me to tell you so. He thinks Schaumberg-not that I ever saw the poor man, but he is bound to be an idiot or the prince wouldn't be jealous of him. As nobody had stolen the diamonds after all this fuss, so no one has stolen the affection of either of you from the other. I can see by the way you look at each other that I won't need to apologize for leaving you alone together while I run up stairs to pack." "Oh, but you are not going to leave us!" cried the princess.

"I should be delighted to stay, but there is no rest for the wicked, and I must get back to London."

With that the girl ran to her room and there reread the letter she had re ceived. It ran: DEAR MISS BAXTER-We are in a very considerable dilemma here, so I write to ask you to return to London without delay, going back to the Tyrol later on to finish the investigation of the diamond mystery. The Duchess of Chiselburst is to give a great ball on the 26th. It is to be a very swagger affair, with notables from every part of Europe, and they seem determined that no one connected with a newspaper shall be admitted. We have set at work every influence to obtain an invitation for a reporter, but without success, the reply invariably given being that an official account will be sent to the press. Now, I want you to set your ingenuity at work and gain admittance if possible, for I am determined to have an account of this ball written in such a way that every one who reads it will know that the writer was present. If you can man age this, I can hardly tell you how grateful the proprietor and myself will be. Yours very Miss Jennie Baxter sat for some moments musing, with the letter in her hand. Suddenly her eyes lit up, and she sprang to her feet.

"What a fortunate thing it is," she cried aloud, "that I did not send on the refusal of the princess to the Duchess of Chiselhurst! I had forgotten all about it till this moment."

(To be continued next Thursday).

The movement to raise a subscription for the gift of a punch bowl to General Cronje has the appearance of an effort to assist him in drowning his tribulations.

The recent $13,000,000 failure in New York may be taken as another evidence of the misfortune which accompanies the unlucky number.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning addressing himself to the princess, "how | yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. II's Worse for a Woman

To suffer with skin disease than it is for a man, for a smooth skin and a clear complexion are essential elements of female beauty. So-called skin diseases are in general blood diseases, because they are commonly the result of an impure condition of the blood. What light is to the landscape the blood is to the cheek. Light is the great landscape painter, and the hues of his palette transform a dull world into a fairyland. So pure blood touches the lips with cherry and the cheek with the great the state of the lips with cherry and the cheek with rose, gives the ears a tint like the sea shell's, brightens the eyes and whitens the hands, until it transforms homeliness into actual beauty, Often a fair face will be marred by erruptions, pimples of some disfiguring rash, resulting from a scrofulous taint of the blood. When the taint of scrofula is in the blood it will be sure to show itself soon or late; and its manifestations may be as repulsive as they are painful. Many people have been cured of scrofula in its most malignant forms by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This remedy is remarkable for its power to purify the blood. It absolutely eliminates the corrupting ele-ments. It makes the blood clean and rich. It increases the action of the blood-making glands, and so increases the quantity of pure blood supplied to the body. It is a true beautifier, giving a hue to the complexion and a sparkle to the eye, which can only come when there is a bountiful supply of pure, rich blood.

There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery," neither does it contain opium, cocaine or any other narcotic.

There is nothing "just as good" for blood diseases as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, therefore do not be imposed upon by a substitute medicine, sold only for the sake of making an excessive profit out of you. It you want the "Discovery" insist on getting it.
