MARK HANNA IN NORFOLK.

Made a Short but Effective Address.

TALK OF A BUSINESS MAN.

The "Man With Horns" Turns Out to be a Very Genial, Substantial Man of Affairs, who Talks of the Political Situation From a Common Sense Standpoint.

From Friday's Daily.

If Mark Hanna brought the notion with him from the east that he was entering the enemy's country, he had earlier demonstration this morning that quickly dispelled that idea. At every place he has stopped during the day he has met with a rousing reception, and by the time he reaches Bryan's home this evening he will be thoroughly convinced that for a pop state Nebraska gives a mighty warm welcome to the chairman of the national republican committee.

The Hanna train came into Norfolk at 11:10 this morning, 10 minutes ahead of schedule time, and was greeted by an enthusiastic round of cheers. Besides Senator Hanna, the party consisted of Senator Wm. B. Frye of Maine and Victor B. Dolliver, a brother of Senator Dolliver of Iowa, who was here with Roosevelt. The party was in charge of Mr. R. B. Schneider, national committee man for Nebraska, and was accompanied by a representative of the Associate Press and special correspondents of leading papers.

Only Mr. Hanna and Mr. Dolliver left the train here, as they were scheduled to remain but 15 minutes. These gentlemen were escorted by a reception committee to the platform which had been erected at the corner of Fifth and Main streets, where a crowd extending a great distance in every direction greeted the man who is charged by the popocrats with running the universe to suit himself and causing the rain to fall or not as suits his pleasure.

While no attempt had been made by local republicans to make a demonstration today, there being no parade or other spectacular features, yet the number of people who came to hear and see Senator Hanna made one of the largest crowds that has been in the city this year, some even going so far as to place the estimate of people in town at as high a figure as were here on Roosevelt day. It is doubtful if this is true, but outside the Roosevelt demonstration no crowd has equaled the one of today during the present campaign. The morning train from the Verdigris line brought a large number of people, and the special from west arriving at 10:45 was well filled. Besides these, hundreds of teams kept bringing people all the forenoon.

Instead of a "man with horns" the people saw Mark in Hanna an ordinary looking business man, somewhat stout, a little past middle age, clad in striped trousers and a dark sack coat. The face of Mark Hanna is the most disappointing feature of the man to those who had formed an opinion of him from the public prints. Instead of having the hard, grasping face that has been pictured he is possessed of a most genial countenance, kindly, good natured and responsive to the evidences of good will which greeted him. At the close of his address he was beset on all sides by those anxious to shake his hand, and utilized every minute of his time to good advantage in that direction, using both hands and shaking as many as his broad palms could grasp at a time. Just before entering the train he stopped and shook hands with a bevy of school girls, chatting with them a few moments in a happy sort of way. He seemed to enjoy this proceeding as thoroughly as did those who greeted him, his genial face lighting up as he realized the cordiality of the reception tendered him in Bryan's home state.

Mayor Robertson introduced the senator in a very brief manner and Mr. Hanna began to speak. The following is an epitome of his remarks:

Fellow citizens: I feel more than grateful for the compliment that has been paid me on my visit to this state. I appreciate it all the more fully because I understand I have been advertised to appear with horns. I hope I shall not be a disappointment but as a matter of fact I am nothing more than a plain American citizen. I don't claim to use different methods than those used by other American people, but will endeavor to tell nothing but the truth.

If my experience with large business interests entitles me to form an opinion on political questions it is that if we want a continuance of prosperous conditions we should vote to let well enough alone.

I understand you have a candidate for president living in this state. I believe he has got it bad—so bad that he would be willing to sacrifice all the material interests of the people and his country for the gratification of his personal ambition. You are not called upon to sacrifice your own interests for his personal gain but should sustain your interests and that of your country. I doubt if there is a sane man in the country who desires a return to the conditions of four years ago when prices for farm lands and produce were only about half what they are now.

That was a time when the democrats thought they would show us how to run the country and they did show us most effectively. They began by tearing down the structures that the republicans had labored for years to build, but I don't believe the people are willing now to unite with any man or set of men or party in tearing down what has been accomplished in the last four years. Who is better fitted than our own beloved president to see that present conditions are maintained?

What we want is sound, conservative business policies. Capital is always timid and is constantly on the watch for any sign of danger, when it will retire to the bank vaults and stockings. When money is idle men are idle. Confidence underlies all business activity. When people have confidence in the future and no disturbing influences appear on the business horizon then capital is employed and labor is employed and when capital and labor are employed there is a demand for farm products and the prices are better. Nothing can better illustrate the bond between the capitalist, the laborer and the farmer, and no sign of prosperity is as conclusive as the consumption of wheat per capita. Four years ago the average amount of wheat consumed per capita by the people of the United States was 3 1/2 bushels. During the years from 1897 to and including 1899, when the wheels of industry were turning, when all wanting work got it, when capital and labor were busy, the per capita consumption of wheat was 6 1/4 bushels. It shows the difference between good and bad times, that this extra consumption of wheat gave an increased demand in the markets for wheat of more than 100,000,000 bushels per annum. You cannot separate the interests of the consumer and the producer and Mr. Bryan's endeavor to array class against class is an argument of last resort that shows their desperation. The argument of imperialism is all rot, an insult to American citizens whose hearts contain no imperialistic tendencies and McKinley has no intention or desire of being crowned king. It is less effective than the argument for free coinage and a 50-cent dollar made in 1896.

A voice: "Did you ever see a 50-cent dollar?"

Yes, here is one (holding it up) but we will not talk free silver. It is a dead issue. It isn't being discussed by any of the democratic speakers, not even by Mr. Bryan, especially in New York. As for imperialism, its seed has not yet been planted in the heart of an American citizen and this argument falls by its own weight. As soon as Mr. Bryan found that the people, not excepting the people of Nebraska, favored expansion he began talking imperialism, but it don't go down.

There is a patriotic side to that question. As a consequence to the war with Spain and Dewey's victory in the Philippine archipelago that country has come into our possession by every right of treaty and purchase. The soldiers have planted the American flag on those islands and it will not be hauled down, and the man who advocates hauling it down will be snowed under by the votes of patriotic American citizens.

Lately they have been terming it commercialism that rules the desire of the Philippines.

If the possession of that strategic point gives the people of this country a foothold toward opening the doors of the far east to our products and thus benefits our farmers, then for God's sake let us have "commercialism."

The democrats won't admit that there is any prosperity and don't want McKinley prosperity but we will make them take it whether they want it or not.

The leaders in the campaigns furnish the issues. The democratic leaders seem to believe that if they can originate a catch-penny issue to distract the attention of the voters they think it is a good thing, but the voter will not be misled.

It seemed to be a great disappointment to the crowd when the engine of the special whistled and Mr. Hanna hurriedly closed his remarks. Many were heard to wish that he could talk an hour or more. Those who came, not expecting to hear a good address, were most thoroughly disappointed. The senator proved a most pleasing speaker and his remarks went straight home.

The Meadow Grove Press contains an item concerning Roll Lewis' short cut to wealth. He took three head of cattle belonging to S. W. Deuel and sold them to the Meadow Grove butcher. He afterward changed his mind, returned the money to the butcher and drove the animals back home. He then disposed of them to some men driving a herd of cattle through Mr. Deuel's place, requiring the theft and went to Lewis, requiring him to return the cattle in 24 hours. When he brought the cattle back Sheriff Losey and County Attorney Tyler were awaiting him and he was arrested and taken to Madison for trial.

Beels was elected assistant historian of the Past Grand Masters association, while Pas Grand Marquardt and Spaulding distinguished themselves as veteran workers on the floor. The endowment fund for the Odd Fellows home was increased from $900 to over $2,500 during the year, with about $3,000 in pledges not paid in. Johnson of Holmesville was elected grand master; C. A. Randall of Newman Grove, deputy grand master;

THE BEST THEY KNOW.

YOU remember the old lady who rode for the first time on a railway train. There was a frightful collision, but when the rescuers reached her she was quite calm. She said she supposed they always stopped that way. The story well illustrates why so many women are satisfied to live without Ivory Soap. They have never tried it! Naturally enough, they think that annoying odors, sharp chemicals, and wasteful greasiness are common to all soaps.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Prospects for Republicanism Encouraging at Meadow Grove.

Encouraging news of a political nature, from a republican standpoint, was brought down yesterday from Meadow Grove, which was formerly quite strongly populist, by the delegation from that place. There have been about 20 changes from Bryan to McKinley in that neighborhood, while not one change the other way is known. The republicans have a standing offer of $1 each to men in that neighborhood who will make affidavit that they voted for McKinley in 1896 and will vote for Bryan this fall, but not one has been presented.

W. P. Evans, publisher of the Meadow Grove Press, has come out for McKinley and is a member of the republican club. He is the son of C. S. Evans, publisher of the Times-Tribune.

One of the delegates, who has been a democrat all his life, yesterday bet $10 to $1 that McKinley would be elected and the gentleman who took his bet said he didn't want any more even at those odds.

Meadow Grove is strictly a farming community and this shows the trend of sentiment among that class of people.

It is asserted that there are not more than six fusionists in the village.

Alden Benedict's "Quo Vadis."

Never has a more wholesome play, more intelligently acted, come to this city, than Chas. W. Chase's dramatization of "Quo Vadis," which will be presented by Alden Benedict's capable company at the Auditorium on Tuesday, October 30th. Necessarily many of the strongest portions of the book had to be slighted by the adapter, for the entire novel of seven hundred pages cannot be crowded into a stage performance of two and a half hours. To the lasting credit of Mr. Chase, however, he it said that in his six act version he has not lost sight for a single instant of the religious sentiment. Always conspicuous in the book it is pre-eminent in the play. And all lovers of uplifting drama are thankful for this foresight. It makes "Quo Vadis" a play which nobody can see without being decidedly the better for it. It is not strange that clergymen in all sections of the land have bestowed upon it their unqualified endorsement. Every member of the cast is in true sympathy with the piece. Nothing can illustrate this more convincingly than the respectful attention given by the gallery habitues, who might reasonably be expected to exhibit marked restlessness during six acts of such a production in which comedy is almost an unknown quantity and glaring sensationalism has no place. Each role is taken care of worthily.

The play is of interest not only to those who have read Sienkiewicz's wonderful story from which it has been dramatized, for it has been so arranged that anybody can follow its trend understandingly throughout. Its scenery and stage settings are beautiful and appropriate and the costumes correspond faithfully with the period. Everywhere people attend this performance who seldom enter a playhouse and none have been heard of who have regretted being present. We predict for the company in this city one of the most successful engagements of the season.

The Retort Oak has the only positive check known in stove construction. The control of fire is absolute. Hamstreet will answer all inquiries.

VISITED BY INCENDIARY.

Damage at Laurel, Neb., Amounts to $30,000 and Several Persons More or Less Injured.

Laurel, Neb., Oct. 22.—A dangerous fire Saturday night alarmed the citizens of the town who feared the entire city was about to be wiped out. The fire was gotten under control, however, after a whole half block had been burned, and a loss of about $30,000 sustained.

An unknown man was arrested on suspicion.

The fire started at 7 o'clock in the evening in Chris Hansen's harness shop. It spread rapidly and before the flames could be subdued the Park hotel, M. S. Daugherty's hardware store, Gallagher & McBride's saloon, Schwablands' pool hall, Bowling's implement building and a number of smaller buildings were in ashes.

Earl Scott suffered a fractured rib. A number of people were slightly burned and others were overcome by heat, but none of these were seriously injured.

City Council.

The city council met in regular session last evening with Mayor Robertson and Councilmen Brummond, Beck, Degner, Grant, Spellman and Uhle present. Absent—Bullock and Heckman.

Minutes of the regular meeting of October 4 were read and approved.

Committee on nuisances reported that complaint had been made about so much hay being stacked inside the city.

Moved by Brummond and seconded by Uhle that a special committee of three be appointed to confer with the Electric Light and Power company in reference to contract for electric lighting and report at next meeting. Carried. The mayor appointed as such committee Messrs. Brummond, Beck and Spellman.

Mr. Spellman called attention to the fact that most of the sidewalks ordered on South Fourth street had been laid but some had not and the residents wished to know what could be done in the matter. Referred to the street commissioner.

Council adjourned.
