

The Columbus Journal.

VOL. X--NO. 10.

COLUMBUS, NEBRASKA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1879.

WHOLE NO. 478.

Rates of Advertising.

Table with columns for space (line, inch, square), duration (per week, per month, per year), and rate.

Get the Standard.

The best authority... It ought to be in every library...

WORCESTER'S ILLUSTRATED QUARTO DICTIONARY

A large handsome volume of 1854 pages, containing considerably more than 100,000 words...

WORCESTER'S

is now regarded as the STANDARD AUTHORITY, and is so recommended by Bryant, Longfellow, Whittier, Sumner, Holmes, Irving, Winthrop, Agassiz, Marsh, Henry, Everett, and others...

THE COMPLETE SERIES OF WORCESTER'S DICTIONARIES.

Quarto Dictionary, Profusely Illustrated, Library size, $10.00. Universal and Critical Dictionary, 8vo, Library size, $4.25. Academic Dictionary, Illustrated, Crown 8vo, Half roan, $1.50.

GOOD CHEAP BRICK!

AT MY RESIDENCE, on Shell Creek, 1/2 mile east of Mattie's bridge, I have 70,000 good, hard-burnt brick for sale.

WEBER & KNOBEL, Prop's.

KEEP ON HAND all kinds of fresh meats, and smoked pork and beef; also fresh fish, making a specialty.

DOCTOR BONESTEEL, U. S. EXAMINING SURGEON.

OFFICE HOURS, 10 to 12 a. m., 2 to 4 p. m., and 7 to 9 p. m. Office on North A. Street, three doors north of E. J. Baker's grain office.

MRS. W. L. COSSEY, Dress and Shirt Maker.

3 Doors West of Stillman's Drug Store. Dresses and shirts cut and made to order and satisfaction guaranteed.

MAIL LETTINGS.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10, 1879. PROPOSALS will be received at the Contract office of this Department until 3 P. M. of July 10, 1879.

GOLD.

Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world.

WANTED AGENTS

For the fastest selling book of the age: THE HOUSEHOLD FARMERS CYCLOPEDIA. A household necessity—one that every family needs—a library of itself.

E. P. Time Table.

Eastward Bound. Emigrant, No. 6, leaves at 6:25 a. m. Passenger, " " " " 11:06 a. m. Freight, " " " " 2:15 p. m.

J. M. KELLY, CONTRACTOR AND CARPENTER.

Holds himself in readiness for any work in his line. Before letting your contracts for buildings of any description call on or address him at Columbus, Neb.

John S. Christison, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.

Formerly of the New York City Hospital, Blackwell's Island. Office on Olive St., two doors south of Cookburn's Store, Columbus.

MARES & COLTS, HORSES OF OXEN, SADDLE HORSES, wild or broke.

At the "Wagon" on E. 4th St. GERRARD & ZEIGLER, Proprietors.

Chicago Barber Shop.

COLUMBUS, NEB. HAIR CUTTING done in the latest styles, with or without machine. Some but first-class workmen employed.

STAGE ROUTE.

JOHN HUBER, the mail-carrier between Columbus and Albion, will leave Columbus everyday except Sunday at 6 o'clock, sharp, passing through Monroe, Genoa, Willard, and to Albion.

GEORGE HENGLER, 70,000 good, hard-burnt brick for sale.

which will be sold in lots to suit purchasers. 4847

WEBER & KNOBEL, Prop's.

KEEP ON HAND all kinds of fresh meats, and smoked pork and beef; also fresh fish, making a specialty.

DOCTOR BONESTEEL, U. S. EXAMINING SURGEON.

OFFICE HOURS, 10 to 12 a. m., 2 to 4 p. m., and 7 to 9 p. m. Office on North A. Street, three doors north of E. J. Baker's grain office.

MRS. W. L. COSSEY, Dress and Shirt Maker.

3 Doors West of Stillman's Drug Store. Dresses and shirts cut and made to order and satisfaction guaranteed.

MAIL LETTINGS.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10, 1879. PROPOSALS will be received at the Contract office of this Department until 3 P. M. of July 10, 1879.

GOLD.

Great chance to make money. If you can't get gold you can get greenbacks. We need a person in every town to take subscriptions for the largest, cheapest and best illustrated family publication in the world.

WANTED AGENTS

For the fastest selling book of the age: THE HOUSEHOLD FARMERS CYCLOPEDIA. A household necessity—one that every family needs—a library of itself.

BUSINESS CARDS

Dr. E. L. SIGGINS, Physician and Surgeon. Office open at all hours. Bank Building. NELSON MILLETT, Justice of the Peace and Notary Public.

GEORGE N. DERRY, CARRIAGE, HORSE & SIGN PAINTING.

GRAINING, STAINING, Paper Hanging, KALSBOMING, ETC. All work warranted. Shop on Olive street, opposite the "Tattersall" Stables.

F. SCHECK, Manufacturer and Dealer in CIGARS AND TOBACCO.

ALL KINDS OF SMOKING ARTICLES. Store on Olive St., near the old Post-office Columbus Nebraska. 47-15

CAREW & CAMP, Attorneys and Counselors at Law.

Will give prompt attention to all business entrusted to them in this and adjoining counties. Collections made. Office on 11th street, south of Depot, one door east of P. C. Ryan's Grocery Store, Columbus, Neb. Sprich Deutsch Parle Francais.

CALIFORNIA WINES!

Red and White, $1.25 per gallon. A GALLON AT SAML. GASS'S, Eleventh Street.

MARY ALBRIGHT, Merchant Tailor.

Men's and boys' suits made in the latest style, and good fits guaranteed. At very low prices. Men's suits $6.00 to $8.00, according to the goods and work. Boys' suits $2.00 to $4.00, according to size.

LUERS & SCHREIBER

Blacksmiths and Wagon Makers. ALL KINDS OF Repairing Done on Short Notice. ALL WORK WARRANTED.

Furst & Bradley Plows,

SULKY PLOWS, CULTIVATORS, &c. Shop on Olive Street, opposite Tattersall. COLUMBUS, NEB.

WM. BECKER, DEALER IN GROCERIES,

Grain, Produce, Etc. Good Goods and Fair Dealing. NEW STORE, NEW GOODS.

AMERICAN MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE.

Corner of 13th and Madison Sts. North of Foundry. 357

NEBRASKA HOUSE,

S. J. MARMON, Prop'r. Nebraska Ave., South of Depot, COLUMBUS, NEB.

Physicians and Surgeons.

For the treatment of all classes of Surgery and deformities; acute and chronic diseases, diseases of the ear, etc., etc., Columbus, Neb.

LADIES' EXTRAVAGANCE.

Much has been said and written on this subject, often very wisely, and many severe criticisms have been richly deserved. But is extravagance confined entirely to the "weaker sex"? We are told that business men have failed and been totally ruined in "mind, body and estate" through the reckless expenditures of their fashionable wives; and, doubtless, this is sometimes true.

Story of the Mistletoe.

The singular plant, so wondrously interwoven with the superstition and poetry of our Saxon forefathers, and inseparable from both heathen and Christian traditions of "Yule-tide," is a coarse, two-leaved evergreen growing on trees, as many of the mosses and fungi do. Its leaves are oblong, and between every pair of them is found a cluster of small, sticky berries—the same of which the substance called bird lime is made.

How to Pay a Compliment.

To pay a compliment is to tell the truth, and to tell it as though you meant it. And the only way to do that is to mean it. If a girl is pretty or accomplished; if she plays well, or sings well, or dances well, or talks well; if, in a word, she pleases, why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't she be told of it? Don't blurt it out before everybody. That will only serve to make her feel uncomfortable and make you appear ridiculous.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.

"He Has No Mother."

Sitting in the school-room, I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered: "I do not want to hear another word. Willie has no mother."

Take Counsel with Yourself.

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience, and is given from solicitude for their good welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he is accountable. He should derive all the benefit he can from the counsel of those older and wiser than himself. Then he should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his own mind as to the course he wishes to pursue in the world.

It is remarked by some writers that

"excess of ceremony shows want of good breeding." This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overmuch politeness. A truly well-bred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities about him with a shovel, or toss compliments in a bundle, as he would with a pitchfork. There is no evil under the sun more intolerable than ultra politeness.

Story of the Mistletoe.

The singular plant, so wondrously interwoven with the superstition and poetry of our Saxon forefathers, and inseparable from both heathen and Christian traditions of "Yule-tide," is a coarse, two-leaved evergreen growing on trees, as many of the mosses and fungi do. Its leaves are oblong, and between every pair of them is found a cluster of small, sticky berries—the same of which the substance called bird lime is made.

How to Pay a Compliment.

To pay a compliment is to tell the truth, and to tell it as though you meant it. And the only way to do that is to mean it. If a girl is pretty or accomplished; if she plays well, or sings well, or dances well, or talks well; if, in a word, she pleases, why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't she be told of it? Don't blurt it out before everybody. That will only serve to make her feel uncomfortable and make you appear ridiculous.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.

"He Has No Mother."

Sitting in the school-room, I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered: "I do not want to hear another word. Willie has no mother."

Take Counsel with Yourself.

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience, and is given from solicitude for their good welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he is accountable. He should derive all the benefit he can from the counsel of those older and wiser than himself. Then he should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his own mind as to the course he wishes to pursue in the world.

It is remarked by some writers that

"excess of ceremony shows want of good breeding." This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overmuch politeness. A truly well-bred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities about him with a shovel, or toss compliments in a bundle, as he would with a pitchfork. There is no evil under the sun more intolerable than ultra politeness.

Story of the Mistletoe.

The singular plant, so wondrously interwoven with the superstition and poetry of our Saxon forefathers, and inseparable from both heathen and Christian traditions of "Yule-tide," is a coarse, two-leaved evergreen growing on trees, as many of the mosses and fungi do. Its leaves are oblong, and between every pair of them is found a cluster of small, sticky berries—the same of which the substance called bird lime is made.

How to Pay a Compliment.

To pay a compliment is to tell the truth, and to tell it as though you meant it. And the only way to do that is to mean it. If a girl is pretty or accomplished; if she plays well, or sings well, or dances well, or talks well; if, in a word, she pleases, why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't she be told of it? Don't blurt it out before everybody. That will only serve to make her feel uncomfortable and make you appear ridiculous.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.

"He Has No Mother."

Sitting in the school-room, I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered: "I do not want to hear another word. Willie has no mother."

Take Counsel with Yourself.

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience, and is given from solicitude for their good welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he is accountable. He should derive all the benefit he can from the counsel of those older and wiser than himself. Then he should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his own mind as to the course he wishes to pursue in the world.

It is remarked by some writers that

"excess of ceremony shows want of good breeding." This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overmuch politeness. A truly well-bred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities about him with a shovel, or toss compliments in a bundle, as he would with a pitchfork. There is no evil under the sun more intolerable than ultra politeness.

Story of the Mistletoe.

The singular plant, so wondrously interwoven with the superstition and poetry of our Saxon forefathers, and inseparable from both heathen and Christian traditions of "Yule-tide," is a coarse, two-leaved evergreen growing on trees, as many of the mosses and fungi do. Its leaves are oblong, and between every pair of them is found a cluster of small, sticky berries—the same of which the substance called bird lime is made.

How to Pay a Compliment.

To pay a compliment is to tell the truth, and to tell it as though you meant it. And the only way to do that is to mean it. If a girl is pretty or accomplished; if she plays well, or sings well, or dances well, or talks well; if, in a word, she pleases, why, in the name of common sense, shouldn't she be told of it? Don't blurt it out before everybody. That will only serve to make her feel uncomfortable and make you appear ridiculous.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.

"He Has No Mother."

Sitting in the school-room, I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered: "I do not want to hear another word. Willie has no mother."

Take Counsel with Yourself.

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience, and is given from solicitude for their good welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he is accountable. He should derive all the benefit he can from the counsel of those older and wiser than himself. Then he should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his own mind as to the course he wishes to pursue in the world.

It is remarked by some writers that

"excess of ceremony shows want of good breeding." This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overmuch politeness. A truly well-bred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities about him with a shovel, or toss compliments in a bundle, as he would with a pitchfork. There is no evil under the sun more intolerable than ultra politeness.

Spending Other People's Money.

Young men holding positions of trust might profitably study the case of Arthur C. Jennings, who, for eleven years, was the cashier and book-keeper of Mr. James Lynch, a New York wool broker. While the employer was living prudently, and carefully laying aside a trifle each week in preparation for a probable day of adversity, the gay cashier was indulging in extravagant expenses, living like a prince, and entertaining companions who only valued his acquaintance because he was willing to entertain them as lords are proverbially supposed to entertain their peers.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.

"He Has No Mother."

Sitting in the school-room, I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered: "I do not want to hear another word. Willie has no mother."

Take Counsel with Yourself.

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience, and is given from solicitude for their good welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he is accountable. He should derive all the benefit he can from the counsel of those older and wiser than himself. Then he should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his own mind as to the course he wishes to pursue in the world.

It is remarked by some writers that

"excess of ceremony shows want of good breeding." This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overmuch politeness. A truly well-bred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities about him with a shovel, or toss compliments in a bundle, as he would with a pitchfork. There is no evil under the sun more intolerable than ultra politeness.

Spending Other People's Money.

Young men holding positions of trust might profitably study the case of Arthur C. Jennings, who, for eleven years, was the cashier and book-keeper of Mr. James Lynch, a New York wool broker. While the employer was living prudently, and carefully laying aside a trifle each week in preparation for a probable day of adversity, the gay cashier was indulging in extravagant expenses, living like a prince, and entertaining companions who only valued his acquaintance because he was willing to entertain them as lords are proverbially supposed to entertain their peers.

Influence of Religion.

People talk about religion being a restraint upon men. In some senses, it is a restraint. But this is not its chief idea. There are in men certain destructive tendencies—passions, appetites and inordinate affections, which need the curb; and religion operates as a curb upon these and reins them in. But it has other and larger uses than this. Fetters and cords and gags do not represent it. It plants more than it uproots. When the work of correction is needed it has only just begun its operations in the soul, operations which will continue in force eternally.

Silent Men.

Silent men, like Gen. Grant, are sometimes very trying, but they are only so to those who come to bore them. An old friend says that the man who talks too much is like the eternal clatter of a mill; but those who converse magnetically are like the drum that responds to the skillful tap of the player, or the piano that replies to the delicate fingers of the artist.