An old German couple from the east, while stopping at a hotel in Rising, Butler county, claimed to have been robbed of $1,500 in greenbacks. No discovery of the thief, or further explanation.

The Times says that the Exposition building at Chicago "is infested by 'mashers' of both sexes and all grades of civilization. Even the remotest rural 'deestriets' contribute recruits to this gallant army. It is a grand and extensive picnic for this sort."

The time, let us believe, is in the near future when railroads will be built where there is business sufficient to justify the investment, and will be conducted on the basis of the general welfare coupled with a reasonable remuneration to the stockholders.

Why we especially make mention of the fact that Thos. H. Cavanaugh, of Salina, Kansas, exhibited his herd of Herefords, at the State fair at Lincoln, is that we believe the stockmen of Nebraska have not turned their attention particularly to the many good points contained in this class of stock. The reports from our recent fair agree that there never has been a better class of stock exhibited in the state than at the late fair. To show in what light the stock of Mr. Cavanaugh was held at the State fair we learn that all of his stock on exhibition were awarded first premiums. It is stated that Mr. Cavanaugh's attracted much attention at the fair, on account of their great beauty and merit.

Another Party of Nebraska Land Buyers.

Aglar, the St. Louis agent of the Union Pacific, arrived in the city with a party of about fifty men from southern Indiana and Illinois, who came here to purchase lands upon which to locate. These men are all well-to-do and some of them are quite well off, and will prove a valuable acquisition to Nebraska. This evening about fifty more arrived in the city, and they proceed to various sections of the State to prospect and purchase lands. This is the first excursion of the kind from Indiana, and it will be followed by several others between now and winter. Nebraska immigration is now being quite generally agitated in the southern part of Indiana.—Bee.
