A New Deal.

Omaha is making much of the consolidation of the Omaha & Northwestern road with the Covington or North Nebraska, which, when the gap is completed, will give Omaha a pretty direct line to Sioux City and the lumber regions north. This is all well enough for Omaha, but when she assumes that she will necessarily be the distributing point for all Nebraska she makes a slight mistake. It is, and has been for many months evident to the knowing ones that Jay Gould, the great king of railroad schemers, has been centering his railroad affections at an other place, and is gradually but most effectually sapping Omaha. His projects all point to other places than Omaha as the favored ones. For instance, from Lincoln, by way of Fremont to Sioux City. From Lincoln by way of Valparaiso northwest through Platte county to the Niobrara, thus connecting with a Sioux City road and the lumber regions, supplying bridge, victed at Cheyenne for the embez- eastern, central and southern Ne-
