Good Manners.

BY R. W. EMERSON.

'Tis a rule of manners to avoid exaggeration. A lady loses as soon as she admires too easily and too much. In man or woman, the face and the person lose power when they are on the strain to express admiration.

A man makes his inferiors his superiors by heat. Why need you. who are not a gossip, talk as a gossip, and tell eagerly what the neighyour opinion without apology.

The attitude is the main point. Assure your companion that, come good news or come bad, you remain in good heart and good mind, which is the best news you can possibly communicate.

Self-control is the rule. You have in you there a noisy, sensual savage, which you are to keep down, and turn all his strength to beauty. For example, what a seneschal and detective is laughter! It seems to require several generations of education to train a squeaking or a shouting habit out of a man.

Sometimes, when in all expressions the Choctaw and the slave have been worked out of him, a coarse nature still betrays itself in his contemptible squeaks of joy. The great gain is not to shine, not to conquer your companion-then you learn nothing but conceit-but what you do not; to till with him with atter destruction of your logic and learning.

There is a defeat that is useful. Then you can see the real and the counterfeit, again. You will adopt the very logic which you found ircustomary lie.

When people come to see us, we foolishly prattle, lest we be inhorpitable. But things said for conversation are chalk eggs. Don't say hospitable entertainer. things. What you are stands over you the while, and thunders so that I cannot hear what you said, to the contrary.

A lady of my acquaintance said. "I don't care so much for what they
