The next evidence of the richness of Nebraska soil is obtained from the crops raised by actual cultivation. It is not unusual with the corn crop to produce from 70 pounds of ears 60 to 63 pounds of shelled corn, or four to seven pounds over the standard, the general average of production, with average fair cultivation, being 50 to 60 bushels per acre. Great varieties of wheat are grown, the yield being 15, 25 and the Polish variety yielding sometimes 30 to 35 bushels per acre; of barley a fair vield is 30 to 40 bushels; of rye, 25 to 30, oats 40 to 50 bushels. Flax produces 12 bushels per acre.

The Prospect.

Of course the welfare of a community, as of an individual, depends mainly upon the spirit with which it is imbued, and the energy and promptness with which enterprises are carried forward. Since the day when the foundations of our city were laid in the unpretentious settlement on the river banks twentyfour years ago, Columbus has had a regular growth commensurate with that of the State at large. When the stream of immigration was full, Columbus has built up rapidly, and midst of one of the finest sections of fully abreast, if not a little ahead of the times. It has been said that if a Yankee was shipwrecked and was in the night thrown ashore on an island he would next morning be found selling maps of the country to the inhabitants. That such an enterprising people should sometimes embark into schemes that do not pay, not only, but that end in disaster, is to be expected. A good deal of enterprise has been shown in the building up of these new towns along the Jackson & Norfolk R. R., and especially at Platte Centre. These towns spring up mushrooms. Beginning at a time of the year when farmers were just about to haul their produce to market, there was, of course, a pretty lively time there, but soon it will be very different. Let farmers begin to plow and sow, and but very few if any will visit these towns. The little they might have to market, they will take to Columbus, for there they have business in the court house, with the lawyer, with the merchant, and the little mushroom towns will be as dead as a dead and is ready to perform all the condi-

The estimated loss on meats is $213,000, buildings, $50,000, insurance $25,000; making Mr. Boyd's total loss $138,-000.
