THE KUMMER GUARDS.

They Respond to Call, and Serve Their Country on the Untended Field.

The JOURNAL's history of local events would by no means be complete with the omission of the events connecting Columbus with the labor strike at Omaha last week.

On Friday afternoon at about 2 o'clock Capt. Lawson of Company I, Kummer Guards, received a telegram from the Adjutant General, ordering him to get his company in instant readiness for departure to Omaha.

Within thirty minutes, under the active movements of Capt. Lawson, Lieut. Early and Sergeants Hines, Lockner, Bower and Rouson, forty men were ready to take the train for Omaha, fully equipped to do any soldierly duty that they might be called upon to perform.

Besides the regular members of the company, there were fourteen volunteers for the special occasion.

At about 4 o'clock Gov. Nance arrived in the city from Osceola by way of Silver Creek, and immediately began using the telegraph, to ascertain the exact situation of affairs, and the probability of the need of troops from this point.

It was near 7 o'clock when the party left by special U. P. train for Omaha, in company with Governor Nance, where they arrived, unannounced, within two hours and a half. No preparations having been made for them, it was quite a while before they found the Smelting Works, whose property they were to guard.

The situation at Omaha was about this: workmen at the Smelting Works had been receiving $1.30 a day, and, considering their wages too low for the kind of work, they had demanded an increase. Failing to receive it, they had quit work, and were guarding the establishment to prevent others from working.

Under cover of darkness, two car loads of negroes who had been bro't from Kansas, (a portion of them being provided at Council Bluffs with fire-arms for defence, in case of attack), were run into the works in spite of the guard, some personal encounters taking place, but no serious outbreak, and this act resulted in great excitement the next day among the strikers and working men generally, and there was a general apprehension of trouble.

All the workmen in the manufactories, including the U. P. shops, quit work, and joined the parade on Friday afternoon.

The first telegram appears to have been from J. H. Millard to Gov. Nance, on Friday morning that a riot was imminent and asking that President Hayes be telegraphed for, for the use of two companies at Ft. Omaha.

The next was from the Smelting Works asking for immediate protection.

The next from Geo. H. Guy, sheriff of Douglas county, saying that he had consulted with Alexander and Mayor Chase, and thought the Gov. had better send the company from Columbus.

The good people of Omaha and the State will not only justify the Governor in his action, but will thank him for the promptness and efficiency which, perhaps, saved the property and the lives of many.

When law is set aside; when the public welfare is left sight of; when the ship of state drifts aimlessly in a storm, the sport of the elements, nothing is safe. Then it is that citizens rejoice to see an official do his duty, see the right and maintain it.

A meeting of the workmen was called at the instance of Gov. Nance, at which addresses were made by himself and others, and in which he gave them to understand very plainly what the law is, and what his duty would be. He acknowledged the right of any man to quit work, but he can not be upheld in an attempt to keep an other from taking his place, at the same or even lower wages.

The Bee of Monday informs us that the strike was brought to a peaceful and honorable close Sunday afternoon. Mutual concessions were made by both parties, and so closed this excitement.

It is only justice to say that Capt. Lawson's Co. was highly complimented by the Governor and Adjutant General for their promptness in responding to a call of duty, and for their conduct during their brief service, and we may add that no citizen of Columbus, acquainted with the military record of Capt. Lawson, and with the general reputation for intelligence and a conscientious discharge of duty, feared for the good name of the city. We are glad to record their return on Monday morning, safe and sound.

The occasion has given opportunity to show the stuff of which they are made, and it only remains to hope that they may always be so successful in aiding in the preservation of public order.
