S. O. Raymond visited Kansas City and Atchison last week. He says that below Ullyses the crops looked in excellent condition. In southeastern Nebraska and eastern Kansas everything looked splendid, and corn was two feet high. Mr. Raymond thinks very favorably of both the cities he visited as places of business.

J. H. Reed sold 14 fat steers the other day. For an experiment he weighed them before beginning to feed them for the market, to see what could be done, and says that in the 55 days he fed them they gained on an average 200 pounds apiece. He believes that it is not best or cheapest to fatten cattle in mid-winter, and estimates the ratio of corn necessary at 3 to 5, in favor of warm weather.

After a series of wild wind and rain storms a preacher felt it a duty bound to raise a petition invoking the Divine power not to send any more devastating winds and rain torrents, but to let the waters come gently, drizzle-drozzle, drizzle-drozzle, that they might penetrate into the soil and do good to the crops. If appropriate at any time, such a prayer would not have been out of place Saturday afternoon.

The Arion Quartette Club assisted by the Maennerchor will give a grand musical entertainment at the Opera House on Wednesday evening, June 16th, for the benefit of the Sisters' Hospital. There is no worthier object, and there should be a large attendance.

The fourth of July this year is on Sunday. It is understood generally that the celebration will be made on the third. By the way, what is Columbus to have in the shape of a recognition of the day? Is Columbus to rest satisfied with being the centre of the State political movements this year?

Mrs. Mary Bellise intended to make an explanatory statement in regard to the doings of certain politicians, but she prefers to wait until after the meeting of the City Council, who have the whole matter under advisement. She claims that gross and outrageous misrepresentations have been made concerning her.

Monday we saw two little children alone in a wagon standing on the street. To be sure the horse attached to the vehicle looked like a gentle animal, but being untied he might have been frightened and run off with the two unprotected little fellows, &c., &c. There are a great many things that might happen, but men should hold themselves to account for accidents, the result of unreasonable or criminal carelessness.

We are informed that of late several instances have occurred of insults, more or less flagrant, to ladies of the city. This is merely one of the results attendant upon the introduction of bawdy houses. The ladies who have been insulted are now prepared to defend themselves which they will certainly do upon the very next provocation. It is nothing but justice to Columbus to say that those engaged in this business were strangers.

We believe it would pay farmers to hold their wool till fall. It always gets low about shearing time. There is really no good market anywhere in the west, and commission merchants in the east, as a rule, will not receive wool for sale without reserving the right to sell, according to their own judgment. This, when it is considered that their commission is so much per pound and is not increased on a higher price, is, prima facie, evidence of an intention to defraud, if a favorable opportunity offers.

The Sioux City & Nebraska R. R. Co. have failed to get bonds in Cedar county, and will not build beyond Ponca this year. They are widening the track, making it the standard gauge to Ponca. They expect to be in running order by the first of July. It is a fixed fact that they will not build in this direction this year. They are pushing to completion the line from Sioux City to Omaha. They are also surveying for a line to Norfolk, and it looks as though they contemplated a far-western route into Colorado.

David Anderson returned on Sunday from Chicago. While there he attended the great Grant and Blaine mass meetings held on Monday evening, where assembled over 20,000 people to listen to the grand orators of the country, Conkling, General Logan, Fred. Douglass and others. He also was present at the Veterans' convention, held in Haverly's theatre building, where Gen. Woodford of New York presided, and where General Phil Sheridan seemed to be the idol of the occasion. Mr. A. obtained a complimentary ticket from Major Furay to admit him to this convention. He also visited the Woman's Rights convention, held in Farwell Hall, presided over by Susan B. Anthony. He listened to some very fine orations delivered by Phebe M. Cousins and Mrs. Spencer; he also took in Barnum's great show and McVicker's theatre. He was present in the National Convention, at its opening on Tuesday and beheld the grandest sight ever witnessed in America. Having been present at the first national republican convention held in the city of Philadelphia in 1856, and at the national convention that nominated Fillmore and Donaldson in the same city, yet those gatherings are as pigmies compared with the present assembly now meeting in Chicago. Over 10,000 people all seated comfortably within the walls of the handsome and best arranged public building ever occupied by any assembly in this country, where were assembled scores of the most brilliant orators and finest statesmen of the nation, and on the outside of the building were 10,000 anxious and excited persons who could not gain admittance at all. He was in the all-night session of Friday and Saturday, when Emery Storrs, who defended the Illinois regulars, and set the house ablaze, by his eloquent allusions to the grand old hero, which burst of applause lasted continuously 27 minutes by the watch. Mr. A. could write a volume of the exciting and interesting scenes witnessed there during his stay of five days, his position was close to the speaker's stand, where could be observed all the notables, and where could be distinctly heard every word uttered by the chair and members of the convention.—He was well pleased with the personal appearance of young Prince Leopold, as he entered the convention accompanied by the venerable Marshall Jewell.—The Grant wing he represents as containing the brains and parliamentary experience of the convention, but thinks at this writing they lack the votes to nominate.

The Storm. Saturday last at about half past two p. m., this region of country was visited by a storm of rain, accompanied by very fierce winds. Not indeed, like the cyclones that have visited some other portions of the country this season, but a very vigorous exhibition of the strength and push there is in moving air. The wind was from the prevailing direction, northwest, and blew with great violence for several hours. We hear of no human lives lost, and very few animals. Below, we give some INCIDENTS OF THE STORM.

The windmill at the U. P. depot was blown down, and is a wreck. Four men are now engaged, night and day, pumping water into the tank. It is supposed that the company will go to work now and put up a first-class mill and tank. The tower of the old mill, the mast, rather, we are informed, was condemned six months ago.

A portion of the roof over Marshall Smith's brick building, occupied below by Friedhoff & Co., and above by the Knights of Honor, was torn off, leaving only a strip on the south side. We are told that this was caused by defective carpenter work on the cornice. The loss is estimated at $150.

G. W. Phillips had two lights broke out of the front of his store.

Wm. Shiz's sign got away, and was finally sawed off.

Chas. Schroeder's wind mill went down.

D. A. Lord's wind mill was torn from the tower, and scattered over the prairie.

Boards from the lumber yards flew promiscuously.

Telegraph communication east was stopped between this point and Schuyler.

Large two-story brick buildings trembled under the strong pressure of the storm, which was at times so great that it was difficult for a man to stand up. Turning round a corner to windward was no small matter.

Numerous chimneys blown down.

A small tent in the bottom occupied by a family, sojourning, was blown over.

Numerous trees, mostly worm-eaten cottonwood, were broken off at the weak points.

Jacob Ernst, jr., narrowly escaped probable death from falling timber at his father's house. One hundred and forty-five trees were broken off in Mr. Ernst's groves, and three or four panels of picket fence was blown down.

Thos. Flynn's corral was so demoralized that his cattle got out, and had to be watched all night and hunted for the next day.

Heidberg's awning was caught amidship, veered to one side, and hammered at the windows until several of them broke.

The rain dashed in wherever there was an opening toward the north or northwest.

Weather Report. Review of the weather at Genoa, for the month of May, 1880:

Mean temperature of mo., -deg's. 63.56
Mean do of same mo. last year. 64.02
Highest do on the 24th -deg's. 96
Lowest do on the 1st -deg's. 49
Ordinarily clear days. 15
Very cloudy days. 9
High winds -days. 10
Calm days. 5
Rain or snow fell -days. 5
5 inches of rainfall. 0.83

Prevailing winds from S. and S.W. Slight hail on the 23d, from 1/2 to 1 in. in diameter.

Solar halos on the 5th and 9th.

The month has been remarkable for the almost constant prevalence of southerly winds. On 22 out of 31 days the wind blew from that direction, and at times with great force; add to this the fact that the rainfall is nearly 2 in. less than the minimum, and 5 in. below the maximum of the same month for the past 4 years, and we need not be surprised that vegetation has suffered for the want of sufficient moisture, when we consider that the winds, heaped to a high temperature, have passed over a long stretch of country from Texas north, in all of which the rainfall has been so very light, so that when they reached this section they absorbed the moisture with the avidity of a hot iron.

Recently while David Mackie was boring a well on the premises of Robert Curren, the auger struck a brick heap or something of the kind at the distance of 55 feet below the surface. Fragments of limbs and bark and part of a log were brought up. The auger was passing through a tough, black clay when these antediluvian relics were reached.—Oceola News.

Thoroughbreds. Breeders of stock in Platte county will be interested to know that A. Heinrich & Sons of the Springdale Stock Farm on Shell creek, in this county, are starting in an enterprise that we believe is the first of the kind for Platte county, viz., the breeding of thoroughbred short-horn cattle. As already noted in the JOURNAL, they recently purchased seven head of thoroughbreds, which with one already on hands, Baron Oxford, gives them an excellent beginning for their commendable enterprise. On Thursday last, in company with our neighbor farmer, J. H. Reed, we visited the Springdale farm, to see this accession to the good herds of Platte county. The list comprises two three year old, Angelina 2d and Golden Maid; one two years old, Lady Gertrude; two yearlings, Lady Catherine, Topsy and Queen Esther. By the side of Angelina is Sir Lawrence, one month old. They are all certainly very fine looking animals, and the Messrs. Heinrich deserve commendation for their enterprise in starting an industry that is destined to make or help to make a grand revolution in stock-raising in old Platte. No one any longer disputes the propriety of purchasing thoroughbred males for use among common herds and flocks, knowing that it costs no more to raise good stock than poor, and that the prices obtainable are always much better, and sales always swifter. Let two men take a hundred cows each, and one use a thoroughbred bull, the other a scrub, and the difference in the outcome in three years will be very considerable, so much so, indeed, that the latter will be ashamed of himself. Common calves are worth three to six dollars, half-bloods from fifteen to twenty-five.

But thoroughbreds are a still better property. Being "completely" bred, or bred from the best blood through a long term of years, certain general characteristics are fixed and transmitted to the progeny, and it is this stability and "fixed purpose" that give the thoroughbreds their superlative advantage over "scrubs," and their high superiority over grades, so that it is not an uncommon thing that a thoroughbred row should be sold for tens of thousands of dollars.

Having his stock for sale we did not consider it pertinent to ask Mr. Heinrich the cost of them, but he told us that he was asked $400, $500 and $750 each for cows no better than these of his.

By OROCK COX.

McCormick of the Oakdale Pen and Pencil, in a lengthy article on some questions raised in the JOURNAL, says:

Mr. Hulthorst objects strongly to the sacerdotal robes at the altar. That is to lame a step for a Protestant of his ability. Christ never protested against the robes of the Jewish Rabbins at the altar. At the altar a priest should wear his robes to invest his person and office with all possible solemnity and impressiveness. Among his people a minister distributing words of cheer or reproof or warning he is an Evangelist, and he can wear the garb of a worker. While on earth Christ did the most of his work as an Evangelist, but near the end He anointed with the most impressive solemnity His Bishops, and they in turn their successors and clergy, and there is nothing in the words and example of Christ or his apostles against the forms and ceremonies of the Catholic churches as they are this day.

Shall It Be? MR. EDITOR:—Shall Columbus celebrate our National Birthday? or shall it be left to other localities to do the honors? With our brightened prospects by recent showers, we have reason to rejoice and be glad, and let us have a grand old-fashioned Barbecue on the 5th day of July. There are a great many of our old patrons who would visit their old stamping ground, and with the L. & N. W. R. R. completed to our city, both old and young would have an opportunity for a social reunion, such as we used to have in our pioneer life. I do hope a meeting will be promptly called and appropriate committees appointed to get up a celebration worthy our facilities and advantages. Dor.

For the JOURNAL. Wool. I notice in the JOURNAL, sales of wool in Columbus. Who is it makes purchases of this kind, and why do they not advertise and let the people know what they are doing? But of this I can assure them that unless Columbus buyers are more liberal than they have heretofore been, farmers will ship their wool, for with competing lines of railroad it would pay them to do so. "A word to the wise," etc.
