THE STONE-CUTTER'S STORY. He was whistling over his work, careless, from long custom, of the solemn significance of the letters he was cutting in the white marble. The June sun was nearly at the end of the day's journey, sinking slowly to rest upon the bosom of the broad Atlantic, whose waves washed the shores of the little seaport town of Monkton. A stranger, handsomely dressed in gray, with large, lustrous brown eyes, came to the fence that was around the yard where the stone cutter worked, and read the lettering almost completed, upon the tombstone: HIRAM GOLDBY, Aged 35, LOST AT SEA, JANUARY, 1850.

o-war, and Pearl was just a shadow when he came home the last time. 'Yes, sir; but he made no money of any account, and so he went again, after staying home a long spell. Well, he never came back. 'Twasn't no manner of use a telling Pearl he was lost; she'd just shake her pretty head and say: 'He'll come back. Not a minute of mourning would she wear, even after his own mother gave him up and put on black; for, sir, it stands to reason he's dead years ago.' 'It looks so.' 'Of course it does; nobody else doubts it but her. Old Mrs. Golby's last words were—'I'm going to meet Hiram,' and they say the dying clasp he put on her neck didn't make Pearl think so. She wore mourning for her who had been the only mother she knew of, but no weeps. Weeds for widows, she said, and she wasn't a widow.

How He Took His Vacation and What Came of It. Now in the sixth month of the reign of the good caliph, it was so that Mustapha said: 'I am wearied with much work; thought, care and worry have worn me out; I need repose, for the hand of exhaustion is upon me, and death even now lieth at the door.' And he called his physician, who felt his pulse and looked upon his tongue and said: 'Two dollops! (For this was the oath by which all physicians swore.) 'Of a verity thou must have rest. Flee unto the valley of quiet and close thine eyes in dreamland; rest; hold back thy brain from thought and thy hand from labor, or you will be a candidate for the asylum in three weeks.'

But when he reached his Uncle Ben's they received him with great joy, and placed before him a supper of homely viands, well cooked and piled upon his plate like the wreck of a box car. And when he could not eat it all they laughed him to scorn. And after supper they sat up with him and talked with him about his life as he had never in all his life so much as heard. And he answered their questions at random, and lied unto them from time to time. He knew Uncle Ezra and Aunt Bethesda, and once he said he had written a letter from Uncle George last week.

Now they all knew that Uncle George was shot in a neighbor's sheep pen three years ago, but Mustapha was not that it was a lie. He was sleepy and only talked to fill up the time. And then they talked politics to him and he hated politics! So about one o'clock in the morning they sent him to bed. Now the spare room, wherein he slept was right under the roof where there were ears and bundles of ears of seed corn hung from the rafters, and he bunged his eye with the same, and he hooked his chin in the festoons of dried apples, and shook dried herbs and seeds down his back as he walked along, for it was dark. And when he sat up in bed in the night he ran a scythe in his ear.

And it was so that four boys slept with him for the bed was wide. And they were restless and slumbered crosswise in the bed, so that Mustapha slept on a wink that night, neither closed his eyes. And about the fourth hour after midnight his uncle Ben snote him on his back, and spoke unto him, saying: 'A wake, arise, rustle out of this and wash your face, for the rooster and bacon is fried and the breakfast waiteth. You will find the well down at the other end of the cow lot. Take a towel with you.'

When they had eaten his uncle Ben spoke unto him, saying: 'And let us stroll around the farm.' And they walked about eleven miles. And his uncle Ben sat him down upon a wagon and taught him how to load hay. Then they drove into the barn and he taught him how to unload it. Then he girded up their loins and walked four miles, even into the forest, and his uncle Ben taught him how to chop wood, and they walked back to supper. And the morning and evening were the first day, and Mustapha wished that he was dead. And after supper his uncle Ben spoke once more and said: 'Come, let us have some fun.' And so they hooked up a team and drove nine miles down to Belcher's branch, where there was a hop. And they danced until the second hour in the morning, when the hair had been shaved, and from their throats a terrible offensive matter oozed constantly, until the swelling was reduced and the head and face assumed nearly their normal size. Attempts were then made to free the incisions of matter by injecting large quantities of water into it. It was noticed that when water was forced into the holes, the flesh of the arms of the attendants said, 'it seemed as if all the flesh between the bone had turned to corruption and ran out.' When Truesdale was told that he could not possibly recover, he called his wife into the room and confessed to her that he had robbed the Platts girl's grave, and referred to a certain night when he left the house and refused to tell her where he went, at the time when he committed the crime. He said he dug down to the head of the coffin, broke it open, and taking his knife out around the neck of the corpse through the flesh to the bone. He then placed one of his feet on the breast of the corpse and taking the head in his hands pulled and jerked it until it came off by mere force. He afterward rejoined the lower jaw and threw it where Fred Auer found it. He closed his confession by telling where the skull could be found, under the straw in a certain manger in the stable. It was found there and given up to the Platts family. The last three attendants, Truesdale's existence were terrible, not only to himself but to those who watched him. The poison from some corpse (for it is believed that he had recently opened several graves) which was communicated to the attendants, by sticking a raw spot on the inside of his knee, appeared to course through every vein in his body. Not only was his person offensive to the eye, but the odor and heat of his breath was so offensive that it was impossible for the attendants to wait on him properly. The breath was so poisonous that when one of the attendants held his hand six inches from the dying man's mouth it stung the flesh like hundreds of nettles. Those who waited upon him were obliged to wear gloves to keep the odor from their hands. The man's skin and flesh was so rotten that it seemed as if it would drop from the bones if touched, and his eyes actually decayed until they became sightless. For two days before his death a coffin had been in readiness, and the attendants were waiting to place him in it as soon as the breath left his body, and get him under ground immediately. Under his death none of the attendants had the temerity to touch the corpse, for fear of being poisoned, so they gathered round the coffin, and the body lay, at each end, and the lid of it into the coffin. The lid was quickly screwed down, but before a wagon could be procured the body swelled and burst it off. It was then stowed on, but when the coffin was taken from the wagon at the grave yard on which the coffin again flew off and the body appeared to swell visibly before the horrified attendants' eyes. The fetid, noisome stench from the putrid mass within was such that no one could attempt to replace the cover, and the coffin was covered from sight as hurriedly as possible.

What the Republican Party has Done. It suppressed a rebellion which had armed nearly a million of men to subvert the national authority. It restored the Union to the states with freedom, instead of slavery as its corner stone. It transferred 4,000,000 of human beings from the likeness of things to the rank of citizens. It relieved congress from the infamous work of hunting through slaves and charged it to set the slaves free, not to extend it has raised the value of our paper currency from 38 per cent. to the par of gold. It has restored upon a solid basis payment in coin for all the national obligations, and has given us a currency absolutely good and that our imports in 1879, valued country. It has lifted the credit of the nation from where 6 per cent. bonds sold for 96 cents, to that where four per cent. bonds are eagerly sought at a premium. Under its administration railroads have increased from 1,800 miles in 1860 to more than 82,000 in 1879. Our foreign trade has increased from $700,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 in the same time, and our exports which were $200,000,000 less than our imports in 1860, were $250,000,000 more than our imports in 1879. Without resorting to loans, it has since the war closed more than defrayed the ordinary expenses of the government, besides the accruing interest on the public debt, and has annually disbursed more than $30,000,000 for soldiers' pensions. It has paid $88,000,000 of the public debt, and by refunding the balance at low rates, has reduced the annual interest charge from nearly $151,000,000 to less than $85,000,000. All the industries of the country have revived, labor is in demand, wages have increased, and throughout the entire country there is evidence of a coming prosperity greater than we have ever enjoyed.

In the year 1874 L. A. Gushee obtained a bushel of box elder seed by gathering them on the Blue. He planted half of them in the fall of that year, and the other half the following spring. In the spring of 1876—Centennial year—the young trees from the bushel of seed, numbering 23,000, were set out by L. A. and Sam Gushee, with the help of another person, in three days. They covered eight acres, and now a lower grove cannot be found in Polk county. It is a young forest, and every tree that was planted is growing. This shows how easily we might 'raise our own fire wood' in Nebraska.—Home News.

Grace: 'I am going to see Clara today. Have you any message?' Charlotte: 'I wonder how can you visit that dreadful girl. Give her my love.'
