- Nelson Millet was born in Vernont, September 22, 1822, in which state he remained until his sixteenth year, when his father and family removed to Painesville, Ohio, where, it the age of twenty-one years, he began the study of the law in the office of Gen. James H. Paine and his brother Maj. Ira C. Paine, who were at that time among the leading lawyers in that part of Ohio. At the age of twenty-three he was admitted to the Bar, and immediately entered upon the active practice of his pro-
- In 1846, he married Miss Augusta C. Bump, a most estimable lady, and who now survives him. Mr. Millet emigrated to Wisconsin in 1849, and ocated at Racine, where he shortly afterwards formed a law-partnership with his former preceptor, Maj. Ira C. Paine, under the firm name of Paine & Millet. For twenty-two years this firm was among the foremost in the state of Wisconsin. The partnership continued until Mr. Millet settled in Columbus in 1872. Being of a self-sacrificing nature and congenial disposition, not only were his energies but his sympathies enlisted in the cause, and he labored more for the benefit and pleasure that success would bring to those for whom he acted, than for the gain or satisfaction that victory would afford himself. He was endowed with remarkably fine discriminating faculties and close reasoning powers, which together with his fertile resources, rendered him at once an opponent to be feared and respected by his brethren of the Bar. Like a great general, his resources seemed to multiply as the difficulties of the situation increased, and in the trial of weak or close cases, these legal resources at times seemed almost unlimited.
