Congress convened on the first Monday in December as usual and the President sent in his message, which was read and referred to appropriate committees. The message discusses a variety of subjects. Among the most prominent are southern abuses, civil service system, polygamy, foreign relations, new treaties with China, the army and navy, specie payment, postal and Indian affairs, public lands, education, and district of Columbia. The President presents his opinions on these subjects in a strong and forcible manner. The message is quite lengthy, occupying ten columns of an ordinary newspaper. The most striking item relates to polygamy, which the President asks congress to extirpate, even at the cost of reorganizing the government of Utah. The most prominent financial recommendation is the recoinage of the hoard of silver dollars with sufficient bullion to bring them to gold par. He advocates setting aside the remainder of the public lands to create a fund for educating the illiterate of all sections. The President heartily approves the recommendation of the plan of the interior de-
