INEOLA, a town on the Black Sea, and Velden, a town in Austria, were both nearly destroyed by fire. Three hundred and fifteen houses were burned at the former place.

The State Journal says Vennon is a myth, about the same as mother Shipton. Not at all, brother Gere. He is a bona fide living man, and resides at Montreal, Canada.

A WASHINGTON correspondent mentions as a matter of curiosity that Hayes and his cabinet were all hairy men, while Garfield and cabinet are profeminally baldheaded.

MISS CLEMIE SHONLAN sets up all the type for the Nebraska Volksblatt of Omaha, averages 1,400 ems per hour, and is said to be the fastest female compositor in the state.

The Central City Courier says the death of one hundred horses and one man can be attributed to the introduction into Merrick county of a glandered horse nine years ago.

The Grand Island Times reports a horrible case against one George Wilson of that place who allowed his wife to die from exposure, and then sold her dead body to a physician for $30.

The west-bound stage was robbed the other night nine miles west of Del Norte, Col., by two men. The express pouch and one mail pouch were taken, but passengers were unharmed.

Our exchanges express some fears that the accession of Alexander III. means an aggressive foreign policy and a disturbance of the peace which has heretofore existed with the great powers.

JOHN GRIFIN, of Lafayette, Ind., was kicked the other night in the stomach by Paty Crogan, from the effects of which Griffin has since died. Crogan was arrested and lodged in jail.

The City Council of Chicago have authorized the expenditure of $15,000 in cleaning the streets. It is a good move to keep away disease, and every village, town and city in the United States should follow the example in early spring and thereby save their localities from the visitations of diseases.

GEORGE PARROTT, known by the name of "Big Nose George," a prisoner under sentence of death, attempted to escape from jail at Rawlins, Wyo., seriously wounding Robert Rankin, the jailer, by striking him over the head with a pair of shackles that he had fled off his feet. The fact of his attack becoming known to the citizens, a mob soon assembled, took the prisoner from the jail and hanged him.

That Capitol Appropriation.

THE JOURNAL at the time was not slow to express itself on the propriety of expending a hundred thousand dollars more or less for "a wing to a capitol building," and afterwards for a like amount for a like purpose. The last appropriation was entirely uncalled for, as a public necessity, the other wing provided for had not been finished, and if the old house was still good enough for the last legislature, the new wing with it ought to have served the purpose of the next legislature, without taking a hundred thousand more from the hard-earned taxes of the people, simply to add to the business and enterprise of the capitol city, and line the pockets of some of her lobbyists. It would be well for contingencies outside of Lincoln's circle of influence to look well to this subject hereafter, and select only such men to represent them as will not be pliant in the hands of Lincoln lobbyists. The people of the State may rest assured that the hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars already appropriated of their money to further the local interests of Lincoln, are only the beginnings of a long series of expenditures to be gauged simply by the increasing wealth of the State, and the apathy of those interests which will suffer the most. The people of northern and western and middle Nebraska must realize that the Lincoln lobby is a thing of life, in fact an exceedingly lively creature, that makes its living by just such work as legislative and other jobbing. Knowing that ours is a representative form of government, and knowing that the body of the people are not to be corrupted, they know well how to carry their schemes through by buying that which ought never to be bought, viz: legislative honor. The remedy is to elect none that are for sale.

As hundreds of thousands may yet be saved to the tax-payers by keeping up an agitation of the question, we purpose referring to it occasionally. Several of our exchanges have had something to say recently, and we hope that they will not weary in well doing. We clip some of their paragraphs. The Red Cloud Chief is inclined to anger: "The Nebraska legislature appropriated thousands of dollars for capitol buildings etc., but refused to appropriate a few hundred dollars to furnish seed wheat to the destitute settlers, on the Nebraska frontier. This is a painful subject; we will say no more lest we swear." The Central City Courier thinks there is great waste of time over the inevitable, and remarks: "Our legislature was certainly guilty of great negligence and want of foresight in not providing for an annual levy for the state capitol building. This thing of appropriating every year is getting monotonous and wastes the people's money. A clause in the constitution, could it be got there, specifying a certain amount (sufficiently large to cover emergencies) to be spent annually in the repairing and adornment of the capitol buildings, would much facilitate legislation and dispense with the useless discussion that now has to be gone through with every year." The Okadale Pen and Pencil talks like a meat-axe, and as though it was a second bite of the same dog: "The Capitol appropriation bill has passed, which considering the awful losses of cattle, and general death of business during the past winter, is nothing but a scheme of robbery and oppression. Our Senators, B. K. Smith of Boone county voted for the bill, which ought to subject him, until the soles of his prairie home cover him up in shame, to the execration of his fellow citizens. When we consider that tens of thousands of dollars have been swallowed up in the death of cattle, we do not feel like tempering our words with moderation." The Kearney Press don't mince matters either, and closes its remarks with an exceedingly appropriate question: "The Capitol Appropriation Bill passed before adjournment. $100,000 is the amount stolen from the public treasury for building a needless addition to Lincoln. The manner in which Lincoln worked for it, the trades and tie-ups of their members were disgraceful, and the 'rural rosters' who sided them should be remembered by their constituents. The state is in no condition to be robbed of $100,000 at this time. The people of the central and western portion of Nebraska, have all the burdens they can well bear, and should have been spared this additional weight of taxation. Two years from now Lincoln will want $200,000 more, and so on without end. Would it not be well to look after this matter two years hence?"

The funeral of the murdered Czar took place on the 21st. The Inter-Ocean says it is described by Geo. A. Sala, the celebrated newspaper correspondent, as the most magnificent, most imposing, most pathetic pageant, which in the course of a lengthened career, accustomed to the pomp and vanities of royalty, he had ever been privileged to behold. The funeral car was a bier of ebony and silver, on wheels, with carved silver spokes. The most striking figure in the procession was Alexander III, who walked just behind the hearse. JOHN M. MURPHY, deputy sheriff from Beatrice, Neb., went to Kansas City some two weeks ago to take Frank Laughlin, a mule thief, back to Beatrice. The prisoner was put in his charge and he left in company with a friend of the prisoner who drove the team, and it is thought a deed of violence has been committed as Murphy has been traced to Leavenworth, but no farther.

THERE is a sight worth looking at near Somerset, Ky., on the Cedar Bluffs at the Cumberland river. Every evening about sundown the sky is darkened as far as the eye can see, by great flocks of birds coming to roost in the cedars. Parties recently spent an evening at the Cedar Bluffs watching this wonderful congregation of every tongue, plumage and almost every country this side of the tropics. Started by the approach of visitors, great clouds of the chattering tribe would rise from their perches in the cedars and fly off with a noise like deep and distant thunder. One thing appeared very strange about this bird convention, and that was the peace and harmony that existed between the birds. The hawk and dove roosted in peace on the same branch, while hundreds of robins and sparrows circled in perfect safety around the perch of large owls. In the early morning when these songsters of the grove left their perches for the open fields of the country it was a most beautiful and gorgeous sight to behold. A correspondent to the Cincinnati Enquirer gives a lengthy and interesting account of this bird gathering.

A LADY teacher in the Omaha public schools aged about 35, who had been active and very successful in her profession, eloped the other day with one of her pupils, a youth of about 18 to 20 years of age. The event created quite a sensation in Omaha circles. It has transpired since she left the city that her financial matters are not so straight as some of her teacher acquaintances could desire, having borrowed various sums of money from them, as well as many other bills in the city remain unsettled. The freak on the part of the lady is unaccountable, and the press of Omaha fail to explain it or give the names of the parties concerned.

The action of the President and Secretary Kirkwood in revoking the acceptance of the resignation of R. B. Harrington by their predecessors and restoring him to his position in the land office is a wet blanket to the army of spool-thrusters that has invaded Washington and demanded the discharge of all the present federal officials in the state to make way for the favorites of the present senatorial delegation. Mr. Harrington was a persistent Paddock man, and has not been proscribed therefor by the administration. It begins to look like civil service reform.—Lincoln Journal.

MANY papers have said that Robt. Lincoln at the age of thirty-seven, is the youngest man we have had in the Cabinet; there may have been several younger. Alexander Hamilton was a lieutenant Colonel at the age of 18; a member of the Continental Congress at 25, and Secretary of the Treasury at 32—and one who has never been surpassed. William Pitt, the younger, born two years after Hamilton, was in Parliament at 21, in the Cabinet at 23, and Prime Minister at 24.—Ec.

A MAN who gave his name as John McCormick stopped at Goshen, Ind., for lodgings, and soon after sent for a physician who found several of his ribs broken and told the man he must die. He says a company of friends had been drinking in a saloon in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, when a party of roughs entered and a fight ensued. During the melee I killed a man and made my escape I got this far. The man died in a few hours after telling the strange story.

AMERICAN citizens, whether occupying official or private stations, have a perfect right to express their sympathy with friends or with the people of a country for the loss of their ruler by assassination, and every class of Americans ought to know that in this land of freedom of speech and action, the crime of assassination will find no countenance among law abiding citizens whether the assassination be among our own or other dignitaries.

HENRY KETCHELL of Mitchell Co., Kansas, was recently murdered and found lying dead in front of his dug out, with his skull mashed in, a fatal wound in the head, and one in the back. There was evidence of a bloody fight, and that Ketchell had used an axe with good effect, having cut off one of the murderer's fingers. R. W. Knox has been arrested for the crime, together with his son and hired man. One of the men arrested has lost a finger.

THE persons who will be tried for the murder of the Czar are Roushskaff, who confessed that he threw one of the bombs; Andrei Telejko, who admits participating in the preparation for the crime; Timofei Michaeloff, who shot a policeman in resisting arrest at the Ritzkoff's domicile; and a woman named Hessian Helfmann, supposed to have been an accomplice of Navrotski, who committed suicide when the police entered his house. THERE appears to be a full determination on the part of the Democrats of the senate to resist in every way the election of senate officers until June or even December. Senator Hoar said the declaration of Mr. Brown was revolutionary and treasonable, that no such treason had ever before been uttered in the senate.

SARAH ANDREWS of Alexandria, Va., committed suicide the other night without any known cause. The Alexandria News says: She was a young lady of about the age of twenty-two, of more than ordinary ability and bore the mark of a perfect lady. It is one of those sad cases which occur now and then along the mile-posts of time, which reminds us of the frailty of the human mind and the uncertainty of life.

ALL classes of Republicans are again welcome at the White House. The new president seems to be a man of large enough scope to be on good terms with any sound Republican. It is stated that, until Garfield's inauguration, Senator Hamlin had not been at the White House since March 1877; that Conkling's last visit was just four years previous; and Blaine's three years and seven months.

AMONG a thousand compositors employed at the government office there are three young ladies who have regular cases. During the last three months these three have set more type than any three men employed on similar class of work, so it is stated. If women had an equal chance in life and its varied occupations, we believe they would, as a rule, excel where light work is required.

The attachment of $20,000 to the general appropriation bill was secured by Senator Paddock, for the purpose of aiding sufferers by the drought last year in western Kansas and southwestern Nebraska. This, among Senator Paddock's last actions in the Senate, shows the kind of man he is, always alert and alive to the interests of his constituents, and ready to do service wherever needed.

The President has nominated Thomas Wilson, of the District of Columbia, U. S. consul to Ghent; Mason Bate, of Utah, receiver of public moneys at Salt Lake City; W. H. Llewellyn, of Nebraska, agent for the Mesquit Indians, New Mexico; Ronello W. Berry, of Idaho, collector of internal revenue for the Territory of Idaho.

JOHN T. CROW, managing editor of the Baltimore Sun, was stricken with paralysis about 3 in the afternoon of the 23d, in the office of that journal. He was removed to Barnum's hotel and died in a few minutes. He went on the Sun in 1845, and became managing editor in 1855. He was nearly 69 years old.

LIZZA BARTON, a notorious female horse thief living near Clinton, Ill., who has stolen a number of horses in that vicinity, was sent the other day to the Joliet penitentiary for one year on the charge of arson. She was too young to go to the state prison for horse stealing, and was sent to jail for twenty-four hours.

The great snow storm predicted struck Chicago on the 19th and 20th extending as far west as Schuyler, this state, but the snow west of Omaha was rather light, and did not block the roads; but east of Omaha it was quite severe throughout Iowa and Illinois, again stopping trains by the amount of snow falling.

It is said that the scare in Europe about trichine in pork shipped from this country has produced a marked effect. A heavy dealer in pork in New York the other day that these reports are circulated for the express purpose of "bearing" the market.
