SAUCY EYES. A Story of Summer Masquerading. She came smiling across the fields, her arms laden with hawthorn bloom.

Harold Carleton, as he saw her, thought her the very incarnation of spring, she was so young, fresh, and so full of exuberant vitality. Yet she was only a cottager's daughter apparently.

Harold bowed awkwardly, while a mischievous gleam shot from the brown eyes as he proceeded to tie up the wayward roses. 'This is getting interesting,' he observed.

'I begin to understand how the original Adam must have felt when commanded to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. There, the wisteria is tied up. Faith me,' he said.

'Dear mamma, it was so hard on her last year,' he said to himself. The very day that Harold came home the rector went away on a few weeks visit with his wife.

Harold glanced mischievously at the pretty face half hidden by the tall lilies which she had stopped to smell as she was speaking.

man into the plot, giving him a crown for hush money; and in the afternoon making his appearance at the door, asking for orders. 'Oh, Adam, is it you?' cried Katie.

'Here is your work, Adam,' said Katie; 'tie up the roses and then weed this bed of hyacinths, train this wisteria, and if you have any more time come to me for further orders.'

'Faith me, but it is that same as you say,' replied Adam, drawing his straw hat further down over his eyes.

'Dear mamma, it was so hard on her last year,' he said to himself. The very day that Harold came home the rector went away on a few weeks visit with his wife.

'What did you wish to say him, miss? For it's meeself as will be ather siding the loikes of me to yeas.'

So, calling Adam, he took the old man into the plot, giving him a crown for hush money; and in the afternoon making his appearance at the door, asking for orders.

adding, 'even as I would wish to work the good opinion of my Eve.' The next afternoon Katie went to call on a friend, and Harold disconcertedly watched her departure.

'Why, Beppo, what have you there?' she cried. 'It looks like the scalp of old Adam. I wonder in—' And she broke into a fit of ringing laughter.

'Very well,' said Katie. 'I'll think of it. But you must remember it was not a woman who made trouble in the garden this time.'

'What do you mean?' Her eyes danced with mischief. She was enjoying his perplexity to the full.

'And she met an impudent young fellow, a collegian, who thought himself a prince, but wasn't. And he called her 'Saucy Eyes,' the conceited—'

It Cost too Much. A Chicago man visiting Cincinnati was being shown around by a citizen who said, 'Now let's go and see the Widows' Home.'

A SEASONABLE ROW.

How Esthetics Got a Boston Devotee of Oscar Wilde into Trouble. (Boston Globe.)

'Mr. Gilfeather, you are charged with making an unprovoked attack upon this young man, who is a stranger to you, and smashing his hat down over his eyes. Have you any excuse to offer?'

'If you are anxious to shine in a fashionable line as a man of culture rare,' said the court, 'you must pay more attention to the weather and less to the almanac and let people alone who prefer straw hats when the thermometer is above par.'

'How to Bring Up a Boy. 'If I had a boy to bring up I wouldn't bring him up too softly,' began Brother Gardner.

With the above words an English society journal opens an article on the current habit of good society in search of pleasure.

It is unnecessary to say that pleasure, if it can be taken only as many fashions take it, is not worth the time and money that it costs.
