More than all this -- we know that Columbus dealers have done their very best to "stock up" and prevent coal famines, such as nearly all communities in the state were afflicted with last winter, and they have, thus far, measurably succeeded, because we had two railroads, on which we could bring our supply, so that it one failed, the other helped us out. We hope to see this continue-or what is better, a full supply attainable at all times. Our country friends can rest assured that they will be treated fairly.
