For the Journal. Submitted for Consideration.

I have heard farmers somewhat severely criticised for not entering into the Creamery project more enthusiastically. It is hardly to be expected that we will change our plans as to our stock so materially as we must if we sell the milk of our cows out some hesitation, thought and investigation.

It is one thing for the milk buyer the average cow, at a given price, to have her earn from $30 to $40 per year, besides her calf, but quite another for the farmer to see just they scarcely get time to write up how he is to get from said cow the any advertisement. necessary amount, to change into the $30 or $40 cash. Figures do not design to lie, but will if misused. I have not doubt but what there are cows that with proper care and feed will earn this amount, out there are not many of them in our ordinary herds. What we want to know is, will it pay to milk the cows we have? Exchanging them at once for all first-class cows is impracticable. Whether we will be justified in going to the expense of arranging for special care and feed for those now on hand is the question. I am inclined to think that if common cows will net from $15 to $25 with same treatment we have been giving them timental and comic valentines.
