Officer's Fees.

By some jurists they are likened to courts of special jurisdiction, capable of acting only as auand about 12 o'clock at night the thorized by law. Most clearly not. Quoting from an "quired of them by law for which "be considered compensated by the "fees allowed for other services." This principa! is universal and elementary, and it has been affirmed by our Supreme Court, to which reference was made by the writer in a former article. A few months or protest filed within two weeks from ago a member of our county board stated that if he had been aware that such was the law, the county might have been saved several hundred dollars in the way of allowances for extra work, that custom and usage had been resorted to in that behalf. If custom can fix a compensation for officers, different from that fixed by the statutes of the State, there would not be much use in calling upon a legislative body to act on such matters. Again, it might be asked how did such custom originate, and who was the originator will be granted. thereof? Is it universally known to the people? Does it exist in manuscript, or in the minds of a chosen few? It has also been intimated recently by a public servant that if it is not exactly legal to allow extra pay to officers, other counties in the State, such as Douglas and Lancaster, have done so, therefore Platte should act accordingly. By parity of reason, if those counties should each donate their officials gold-headed canes, should we do likewise and make the tax-payers foot the bill? The bare statement 453 of the proposition demonstrates its absurdity. If officers are not satisfied with the pay the law allows them, they cannot be forced to toil for the dear people. Resignation is always a good defensive weapon. Counties should pay individuals for work done in proper cases, just the same as natural persons, where the law has given them a discretion to act, but officers' pay which is fixed by law should not be increased or made to depend upon the will or caprice of a subordinate tribunal. the excitement entered her carriage The safe course is for commissionand was driven to the castle.
