ED. JOURNAL.—Your last issue contains a communication from some boy or young man, signed "Justice," who sets forth the decision of the U. S. Court in relation to the U. P. R. R. land tax, and defies me to show any law that conflicts with these opinions. I desire to notice his remarks, first, for the purpose of giving him a little good advice; second, to ask him a few plain questions of law to be tempered and explained by "Justice." First, if "Justice" has the very mistaken idea that he can and does make people and especially the U. P. R. R. Co. believe that he is a great, valuable and important friend and protector of their interests, by the use of such silly and laborious effort used in this and other similar public matters, that he is in a very grave error and that the sooner he sees himself as others see him the better it will be for him. Such gaudy, transparent, silly stuff is ridiculous. And now, in future, if he wishes to reply to any person's views on a public subject, do so like a man, and if he sees his views that he cannot so treat or do not merit his notice, pass them by in silent contempt, thereby gaining the respect of all true men.

Second, "Justice" says that he defies me to show any law or decision of court that in any way conflicts with the McShane case. I ask him if the law requiring the homesteadier to pay tax on his claim after he has occupied it five years, whether he has made final proof or not, and when the government gives him seven years to perfect his title, does the decision conflict? By what process or manipulation does U. P. R. R. land go through, that makes it taxable the moment it passes into the hands of an actual settler? And again, if the Co. can transfer their lands or any land by mortgage, to other parties, what kind of title or claim have they, to be able to borrow money on the same, and by what law is the land-holder exempt in our state from taxation? If such laws exist, they must conflict. To deny that this condition of things exists would be a Dale to both.

NOT A LAWYER.
