Gan-shaped projection hung from the lownett, Gere, Holmes and Powers voting | er edge of the cloud, which gradually extended to the ground; then it was that the nature of the phenomenon was decided, for the dust and dirt raised from the earth, could be plainly seen from elevated positions in the city, rising in a dark cloud in the track of the cyclone, with such evident terrible force that it was clear to all who witnessed it that destruction must follow in its wake, and considerable apprehension for the safety of and with but one object in view-to life and property in its course was felt by observers. It lasted about half an hour, apparently moving very slowly, and disappeared very much as an ordinary cloud.

We are unable to learn that any great amount of damage was done, as the course of the storm was, luckily, not through a thickly settled district. John Flechsel had one cow killed and his crops nearly all destroyed. A few acres of corn, which happened to be out of the course of the cyclone escaped. All his small grain was destroyed. Nearly all of the clothing of the family was taken from a line in the yard, and carried away and a wagon was taken into the air and dropped again without doing it any serious damage. The Suffrage Question.

MR. EDITOR: - I notice in the Jour-NAL for June 14, an article from the pen of Mr. E. A. Gerrard, in which D. C. Kavanaugh, sheriff, to Fred- he accepts my challenge made some upon the subject of Woman Suffrage. Henry A. Saunders and wife to Mr. Gerrard seems to admit the first, Geo. Mentz, w. d., $100; 10 acres in second and fourth of those propositions and hinges his argument upon U. S. to James Walker, patent; ne the third, which he mis-quotes by capitalizing "alone." Does the ballot represent "physical power alone," or does it also represent moral power? This seems to be the question raised in the article re-

To vote, as Webster clearly intimates, is to express our will as to the and as to who shall execute those William Dietrichs and wife to Hans laws. The ballot is the instrument and has to do with law and the execution of law .- in other words, Government. The ballot, then, represents Government and the question becomes, Is our government a physical power alone, or is it also a moral power.

one which holds physical force as its final appeal in the execution of its behests. On the other hand, a moral power is one which exerts itself through spiritual influence and never appeals to force. This is the sense in which I used the terms physical and moral power. The question is not, does the government never, in any case, exert a moral influence, but. Does the government, as a government, in the performance of its legitimate and essential functions, make force, the "army and navy," its final appeal? If so, it must be a "physical power alone." The ballot then would represent a physical power alone. For whatever moral power the government possesses it derives, not from the ballot at all, but from the character of the nation, from its press, pulpit, and literature, and from its moral and intellectual institutions.

"The moral power of the will of the governed expressed by the ballot" would be like the moral sussion of the father who should shake a rawhide in his son's face and say, "Johnyou please run after the stock of sewing machines to be found this side of Omaha.

To speak of a law as being "enforced by the consent of the govern- lar buying your notions at Mrs. ed" is an anomaly. Our laws are always in force by the consent of the governed. They are enforced only against those who resist them. They are always enforced by the use of physical power. Law and government are for the punishment of rogues and for a barrier between the lawless and the loyal.
