I was up to Osceola this week found the roads in quite good condition, and in some places perfectly dry. we are to have an early spring, and I saw dozens of farmers husking corn therefore it is well for farmers to get as I drove along; stock of all kinds look well in this locality. I attribute this to the good judgment of Polk county farmers in not being afraid to feed a few bushels of 30-cent corn to the harness, and give the horses that their stock. In my opinion there is Friday and Saturday, March 23d and | are to do the work extra care and | only one way to raise first-class stock, and that is to give them first-class care. People in this part of Nebraska are a little slow in getting started in a good breed of cattle and hogs. They put it off from year to year. I suppose they think that they will be more able after a while, but they are losing precious time. It is better to keep a less number and better quality. It would pay some of our scrub stock raisers to go on the Big Island and have a little talk with Shep Raymond in regard to good cattle. He can give them a few lessons that will be beneficial to them he has a few very nice specimens of the short-horn breed on Mr. Abner Turner's ranche, and it seems to do the fat man good to show his neighbors the difference between good and poor stock.

As the old saying is, "Speak well of a bridge that carries you safe over," but what will you say of a town Thursday and called at the bridge that has been all carried over to the other side?
