EDITOR JOURNAL :-- We had a fine will mature rapidly, while a good deal is earing very unevenly another month of fine weather without frost will give us a good corn crop, but an early frost will nip a good deal.

Potatoes will be a light crop, quality very good, but very few in a hill. Crab-apples now ripe. Hay is a light crop, but everybody is reasonably happy over crop indications at the present time. What we now want is less cost in getting it to market. And now Mr. Editor, your correspondent of thirteen years of continuous scribbling for the JOURNAL, must bid you adieu. Old age, and army infirmities compels Why Not to rusticate in a more moderate climate, hoping thereby to ease a little some of his increasing ailments. With the very best wishes for the JOURNAL, in its increasing usefulness, may its editor be abundantly blessed in giving, in the years to come (as he has in the years gone by) to the citizens of Platte and adjoining counties, a paper that has but few equals and no superior in Central Nebraska.
