> From the first it was very evident that no part of the Rink could be eaved, the flames being flerce and sweeping and the wind from a northerly direction. All efforts were therefore directed to saving the adjacent buildings. The Eimers building was on fire several times, on the outside stairway, the window casements and at the roof, but the vigilance of the firemen and the ceaseless activity of Mr. Brady kept it in hand.

A strong effort was made to save the warehouse, and some of the firemen were inclined to think it could have been done had the hose been first-class, but we doubt it. > A Murderous Assault. One of the most brutal assaults we have ever heard of was made near this city Friday last upon the persons of S. S. Burns and F. D. McMurray, two young men from Appanoose county, Iowa, who were on their way to northwestern Nebraska. They had a covered wagon and were driving a four-horse team. The team became too unmanageable for Eastling and supposing that other parties (coming along the road near by) were pursuing him, he abandoned the team and endeavored to make good his escape.
