We have a lengthy letter from our correspondent at St. Edwards, which we cannot publish this week. It gives the details of a deadly assault upon Hon. M. J. Thompson by one Wm. Vizzard. At last advices Mr. T's doctor expected him to get over his injuries.

Last week we copied, without comment, an article from the Omaha Republican concerning the post-office at Silver Creek. An acquaintance there writes us that the article named W. O., when it should have named H. C. Swartwood; that W. O. is a very fine man.

This evening, the first grand concert of the Sengferfest will be given at Lincoln, to-morrow (Thursday) evening, the second. The JOURNAL several weeks since, had an application for an advertisement purporting to be in the interests of certain lumber firms of Omaha, and headed Cheap Lumber from Omaha. We had some suspicion that there was something wrong in the matter, and paid no attention to the application. It appears that at least one of the firms mentioned to us has repudiated any knowledge of the advertisement.

The dead beat is a man who contracts a debt without any thought or intention of ever paying it, and depends solely upon the forbearance of his creditors for his living. He is generally regarded as in the same list with men who play the confidence game, only that he does his robbery under the guise of business. It is easy enough to say, too, that he lies with the greatest facility, and takes more time and trouble with it all than would suffice to live an honorable life.

A young man was found Saturday morning on the U. P. track near the depot, his body cut in two crosswise, one arm and one leg split lengthwise. It appeared as though he had tried to catch a train, had got mixed up with a brake and been dragged about thirty feet before being cut up. There was nothing on his person by which he could be identified, and his body was buried. We learn that a woman came down from Silver Creek Monday to identify the remains, she believing them to be those of her son.

The Central City Nonpareil has looked at a map of Nebraska railroads and thinks it gets a pretty straight cut-off of about 60 miles for the U. P., by a new air line from Omaha to Valley, the use of the O. & R. V. thence to Stromsburg, an added piece thence to Central City, and visions of machine shops, round houses, etc., "boom up," especially, as is reported by the same authority, a prominent U. P. official not long since said: "Central City is bound to become the best town on our road west of Omaha." No doubt but Nebraska will get all the railroads she wants.

There is talk of another newspaper in Columbus. The city has three now, where once she had five, which leads some people to think that Columbus is deteriorating, while nothing is farther from the truth. There is no business in the world that renders greater value for the money than the local newspaper that does its work even fairly well, and there is none that requires a more independent spirit. A newspaper cannot long live and thrive unless it has the public favor, acquired through honest merit and conscientious labor, but it would seem that we have in our community men who believe the main part of newspaper work is wind, and that those are best suited to it who are fit for little else, and who can be used, on occasions of personal pith and moment, as brass horns are used, to toot for their bosses. By all means let us have another paper, and two or three on top of that, on the theory that the more, the merrier, and "competition is the life of trade," and special interests need special organs.

The crowd at Robinson's show last Thursday was a good one in every respect, large and orderly. The huge tent was well filled, and the entertainment in the afternoon pleased everybody, so far as we know. It may not be out of place for us to remark that since the experience of the Robinsons at West Point, where their tent was torn to tatters by the wind one evening, they are just a little anxious on the evening of a hot day, and this may account for the almsness of their night entertainments. They do, however, nearer what they advertise than any other company we know of, their field is not occupied by gamblers, cut-throats, pick-pockets and such-like gentry, their agents are gentlemanly and evidently capable. L. S. Steele, the local press agent, extended a hearty invitation to the three families of the Wochenblatt, Democrat and JOURNAL to visit the menagerie at an early hour, so they could see the animals under the most favorable conditions. The invitation was accepted unanimously on the part of the JOURNAL and Democrat, and it was a rare treat. Mr. Steele must be an exceedingly kind-hearted man, because he seemed to be on the most friendly terms with all the animals except the three-horned monstrosity and the big elephant with the chain martingales on, both of which are too cross to live in a civilized community of ordinary beasts; the alligator, too, didn't take very kindly to the case that pried open his jaws. He told us a goodly number of facts not ordinarily known about the beasts, among which was that the giraffe had literally no voice, and that the elephant does not hear through the orifice we should naturally suppose, but through a small hole, about midway between the ear and the eye; the laughing hyena, so-called because of its grin, does not ordinarily attack the living, but prefers the dead, and is called the grave robber; one of the animals has the curious function of forming a buttery or lard substance forming a large portion of the tail; when food becomes scarce, the animal can sustain life for some time by eating this substance; one of the tigers showed great anger as we approached the cage, but the fire of his eyes was directed towards an attendant with an iron rod and who was cleaning the cage. The beast would grasp the rod with his paw, then again in his mouth, letting go pretty suddenly each time.—It being a heated iron. Mr. Steele, however, soothed the beast, called it by name, and was evidently on friendly terms with it. The sacred cow is worshipped, the hump or oddity being the peculiar object of adoration; this, Mr. Steele told us, is not a portion of the spine, but a meaty protuberance above the spine, and is the choice portion of the flesh; the water buffaloes are used by natives to ford the Nile, four to six of them mounting the back of the beast, and steering it by pulling the long horns one way or the other, as desired. The vampires or blood-suckers were about as curious an object as any. They have no feet, but cling to trees by claws at the ends of wings and live, always, upside down, so to speak; they are of the bat species. Finding an animal asleep they open a vein and while sucking the blood therefrom they keep up a gentle lulling motion of the wings, and a man, with a dozen or so of them at work on his veins, would soon be lulled to his final sleep. From another attendant we learned that the elephant kept chained is dangerous to strangers, having killed quite a number of men; when he gets too mean they let Mary Loo, who manages him very nicely; she is exceedingly kind and docile, and would not harm the least child a particle. But Steele is now introducing us to the fat woman, the lean man, the giant and other curiosities, and as we have already written more than we meant to, we will stop short, "never to run thus again."

There was considerable destruction of crops in the path of the storm of Saturday week in the western portion of the state. The Grand Island Independent contains these paragraphs: Plenty of time yet to raise a good crop of fax, and besides being one of the surest of crops, fax pays about as well as any other crop that can be raised. The hail was unusually large and fell in some places to an almost incredible depth, and as late the next morning as eight o'clock, drifts of the marbled ice could be seen along many of the fences in the locality in which the storm raged most furiously. In the city the greatest destruction was glass, nearly every house in the city being more or less damaged. At Schwapp's mill 180 lights were broken. At the court house, 450 windows in Keonig's new building, 800 in the Hartford block, and these are but a few of numerous places damaged by the hail, no north exposure escaped. It is estimated that $1500 would not exceed the destruction in glass alone.

Miss Anna Kelly, Miss Anna L. Smith and Miss Rena Sios, all of Lost Creek, are gone on a visit to North Bend. They will doubtless have a happy time together.

Mr. P. Anderson of Fort Collins, Col., was visiting his brother A. Anderson of the First National Bank, this city, last week. Mr. Anderson is largely engaged in stock raising in the west.

David Anderson left the city last week for Colorado. His grand-son, little Harry Spielman, accompanied him, and they expect to visit Greeley, Fort Collins, Denver, Golden City and Cheyenne, to return in ten or twelve days.

Chas. Coan was at North Platte last week to pay a flying visit to his brother Fred. A., while passing that point. Fred is a member of the band of the Fifth U. S. Cavalry and will be located for some time at Fort Riley, Kansas.

L. J. Slattery's family started Saturday last for their new home at Chadron, Nebr. They go by team, and have a pretty long drive before them. The JOURNAL, along with their numerous friends and acquaintances here, is sorry to see them go.

Dr. D. T. Martyn, of Columbus, came up Saturday to see Mr. C. Gray's son who was quite sick. The Doctor returned to Columbus with Mrs. Martyn, who had been spending the week with her father, Mr. F. George sr., and family.—Clark's Messenger.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Willard of Genoa, Mr. and Mrs. Capt. John Hammond and C. J. Garlow left Friday for Maine. Mr. Willard expects to make a three month's visit to eastern cities and summer resorts. Capt. Ham has an eye to business as well as pleasure, while C. J., after the reunion, will go to his old home in West Virginia, and see something of the south before his return.

John Huber and family started Sunday for a trip east, making a visit to their old home in New York; also friends in Pennsylvania, expecting to be gone about thirty days, and intending to see the G. A. R. boys at Portland before their return. John has worked so hard with his lungs for the last five years that we do hope he will give them good rest while breathing the salt sea breeze, so that when he returns again he can make the echoes on Nebraska's plains ring again. Platte county can't well spare him longer than a month, and the town will seem lonesome.

Shell Creek Items.

The German Sunday school of Metz is going to have a picnic on the Fourth at M. Biedora's grove.

Mrs. C. H. Walker, of Denver, daughter of Mr. A. Heinrich, is on a visit to Mrs. Biedora at Platte Center.

Mrs. J. S. Heinrich nee Mary Steinbaugh, of Denver, is also on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Alexander, on Cherry Creek.

A. Heinrich has butchered a spring lamb weighing 48 lbs. dressed. Who can beat that? He has got some more as heavy.

Mr. Rivet has taken the census of Joliet township, not a very pleasant piece of work, during this heat and season of thunder storms. A man like Mr. Rivet, who is always pleasant and friendly, is a good selection for this job.

The German Baptist church on Elk Creek have called a young minister, Mr. Braun to assist their pastor, Rev. H. P. Benthook. Mr. Braun is to labor in this region and is Columbus among our German fellowcitizens. He is an able and good young man.

The aged mother of Mr. R. Lewis has recently come from Ohio all alone. The old lady, although having reached a good age, somewhere between 70 and 80 years, is still hale, hearty and sprightly, her eyes beaming so that many a "sweet sixteen" might envy her.

A pretty hard story is told of a prominent cattle man. We will call the parties A. and B., and if the dog that he don't howl nobody but the parties themselves will know who is who. A. has two farms, one away off. To this he takes his friend B. There he offers to his steward a big price for a number of his own steers, and then his friend B. says, I will take all the remaining steers at the same price. Thus A. made a sham bargain for his own steers and then sold his friend B. by selling him the remainder at a high price. Isn't it pretty sharp?

The crops look fine. Small grain is especially good. Mr. A. Heinrich has a field of barley by the roadside that is admired by all. A great deal of millet has been sowed. David Anderson has sold a carload of seed. Don't know how much Oehlrich Bro. and others have sold, but thousands of acres have been put in. Timothy and prairie grass also promise a fair crop this season. Let farmers prepare good shelter for their milk cows and if cream enough can be furnished, the lessees of the Columbus creamery might be induced to run all winter. Cream enough may be provided if a little attention is given to it.

The late gentle zephyrs have played ball with a number of sheds, granaries and wind-mills, damaging some and destroying others. Fortunately the non-possessors of their property escaped without losses. For the comfort of the losers the story of the stoical Tennesseean may be related. "Jimmy" had but one shirt, and whenever, in seasons "few and far between," that had to be washed "Jimmy" must keep in bed till it was dry. On one of these solemn occasions "Sari Jane," his wife, came running in: "O, Jimmy, what shall we do now; some fellow stole your shirt!" "W-a-l, Sari Jane, them that has can loose," was the quiet reply. Better it is to submit to the dealings of Providence in a christian spirit like the patriarch of old, "The Lord has given, the Lord has taken, blessed be the name of the Lord!" X. Y. Z.

Creston Obligations. I am under obligations to somebody I don't know who for helping me out with the news items. But I am afraid I will receive more credit than I deserve.

One of our East Creston boys came near getting drowned while bathing on the 14th inst. He was rescued by his comrade. You had better heed the old woman's advice, "not to go near the water," (especially on Sunday) until you learn to swim.

I have heard that Mr. Ezra Drake of New York has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Drake. I fear that the storms of Friday and Sunday evenings had a tendency to make a very unfavorable impression upon his mind in regard to Nebraska climate, but one thing he must admit, it is lively.

Mr. James Phillips has a new top to his carriage; the first impression was, he is going to get married. We felt rejoiced at the prospect of new neighbors, but our hopes vanished when he said he was preparing for a trip in the southern part of the state to sell Dr. Baker's remedies. He left the morning of the 18th, and will not return until October.

On Friday evening the 12th, one of Nebraska's "gentle zephyrs" passed over Creston and vicinity, followed on Sunday evening by a young tornado. If it had been a little larger grown it would have swept everything before it. As it was, considerable damage was done. Although no houses were moved yet some thought it a very good time to go down cellar and look after their potatoes. Two posts of W. J. Belknap's wind-mill were lifted about 8 inches. Two of his calves were buried beneath a haystack but were rescued before life was extinct. The barn-roof of Mr. Wm. Knight was blown off, one calf found dead—exact cause of death not known as no inquest was held. Sam. Fleming's corn-crib was demolished. Warren Belknap had an out-building which he intended to move but he don't have to now. He can "reconstruct." Some of the pieces were blown nearly or quite 20 rods. His father neglected to take in his chimney that night and now he has some work for the mason. Chas. Heltsman's barn was blown to pieces and he had to go for help to extricate his horses from the debris. I. J. Nichols's barn was considerably damaged, the roof of the shed part broken in and the main building badly racked. Rose Harbert, W. J. Belknap's son-in-law, was knocked down by a piece of timber from a wrecking barn which passed through the window hitting him between the shoulders. The Brooklyn Ranch estimates their loss at about $1100; some of the men fearing to stay in the buildings rushed out and seized hold of fence posts, one man thought he saw a better thing in the shape of a barrel with only one head, he being a carpenter conceived the idea of putting in another head, so sitting action for the thought he crawled in,—no sooner was he in than the wind set the barrel in motion and away they went down the hill—he soon wished that there was but one head in that barrel, and that that was not his. The storm left behind a trace, the ends of corn-earves and also of small grain look as though they had been burned, some thought that there must have been frost in the storm but I think it was electricity.
