It is so well known that silver was practically on a par with gold until about 1876, that I will not need to prove that point. The fall began when Germany, after having made gold instead of silver the unit of value, began to sell her silver in considerable quantities. Though the demonetization was practically set on foot by law in that empire some years earlier, it was not until 1875 to 1877 that its effects were much felt. The 166 1 latter year it commenced dropping. And upon the same terms and con-Germany was obliged to abstain from ditions the following bills were allow ed and the clerk instructed to issue further sales to prevent the price from dropping rapidly. The United States government in 1873 indicated itself to be under the the year 1881 in the General Fund control of those who wished to demonetize silver by changing its unit of value from silver to gold. The $ 50 55 effect of this act also was not immediately seen or telt. But by 1877 the logical sequence began to be apprecisted, and in connection with Germany's action, affected the price of silver still more. Congress attempted to stay the current by readopting and coining on a large scale the standard silver dollar. But it had 27 00 just taken a fatal step in favoring gold by promising to pay its new 23 00 bonds, principal and interest, in gold, 21 80 and this action more than counter-24 60 acted the partial reinstatement of 22 50 silver.
