1886: - Five years after my first "chew," and that one fully satisfied me for that length of time, I found myself keeping a country store and as tobacco is one of the principal articles on sale in such establishments, I was anxious to keep the very best brands at all times on hand. In order to do this I imagined that by using the "weed" myself, would be greatly to my advantage, hence became an expert or I might say a victim to sad in discretion in its use, and those only who have experimented in that direction, can tell and fully explain the suffering and craving for this most insiduous enemy to mankind, when one is out of tobacco. A thousand resolves and efforts without number found me still a slave to this most burtful and expensive habit, until by chance I noticed an advertisement of "Miller's" tobacco taste destroyer in a newspafrom in Maryland.
