Nebraska's Chance.

In most of the states of the Union the people have but little voice in the selection of United States Senators, but in Nebraska a law was passed permitting them to manifest a preference as to whom they desire for this very important position, by voting on the question at the general election preceding the election by the Legislature for a U. S. Senator.

The re-election of Senator Van Wyck is not only important to the people of Nebraska, but to the people of the United States. It is safe to say that his presence in the Senate has saved millions of acres of public lands from the clutches of the land grabbing corporations.

At the appointed time, Blanco—a magnificent specimen of a man, tall, powerful, and with all the courage of desperation—was taken from his place of confinement in the little jail and prepared to be marched out to his fate. The heavy iron which manacled his wrists and ankles were removed, and he was allowed to make his last toilet.

It is said that apples are falling from the trees from premature rot in Indiana.

A Narrow Escape.

I was suddenly taken very ill at Eagle Lake, this state, the other day with cholera morbus, and used morphine to no avail, and I grew worse and despatched a messenger for a physician, who brought with him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and gave me a dose which relieved me instantly, and I firmly believe that it is I owe my life and the physician who was unprejudiced enough to administer it when all others failed, and I repeat again, I owe my life to your great preparation.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Barton, Randolph county, Ind., was a long sufferer with consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." RIDDLED WITH BULLETS.

Thrilling Scene at the Death of a Murderer—The Victim Gives the Signal to Fire.

Senor Blanco, a man noted for his desperate character, says a writer in the New York Times, that he was brutally and in a most cowardly manner murdered an inoffensive person for some fancied slight. The murderer escaped into the swamps at El Capuy, but the governor with commendable promptitude exerted himself with great vigor, and after a search of ten days one of the searching parties sent out by him ran across the fellow in a part of the swamp inhabited only by alligators, and tying him up, brought him back. He was tried for the murder and sentenced to death. San Domingo, more advanced than America, doesn't use the rope to execute its criminals, but shoots them, and a part of the public plaza is set apart for that unpleasant ceremony. The criminal is brought out and, placed with his back to a low brick wall built for the purpose of stopping bullets, receives his death sentence.

At the appointed time, Blanco—a magnificent specimen of a man, tall, powerful, and with all the courage of desperation—was taken from his place of confinement in the little jail and prepared to be marched out to his fate. The heavy iron which manacled his wrists and ankles were removed, and he was allowed to make his last toilet.

neighborhood, and an investigation has been set upon it.

It is thought this strange acting ground holds the secret of the disappearance of the stranger of many years ago, and an attempt will be made to wrest it away by excavation.

Jackson and the Veteran.

Removals from office that place might be provided for Jackson men were the order of the day, but President Jackson was not disposed to displace any veteran soldier. Among other victims designated for removal by the politicians was Gen. Solomon Van Rensselaer, whose gallant services against Great Britain in the war of 1812 had been rewarded by an election to the House of Representatives, followed by his appointment as postmaster of Albany. He was a decided federalist, and the petition for the removal was headed by Martin Van Buren and Silas Wright.

stinct. He knows he needs medicine because that up like that he doesn't get proper exercise, and most times he's got to clear out his stomach some way.

Dogs get a great deal of their own hair inside of them from biting it, and those what's in the house breathe in a lot of dust and dirt of the carpets. Well, of course, that don't digest, and they're chewing the door-mat or eating straw, and it forms a lump that the juices in the stomach makes harder and harder.

"Companionship is one of the pleasant bits of student life.

The frugal tea parties, when the hostess boils the kettle and sets the table, and we all sit round the fire and discuss the last exhibition, especially our own professor's work therein, or the success of one of us in getting into the salon, which is held every week, and which is a most agreeable never flags, for some of us have lived at the ends of the earth, and can describe them well, and others are political spirits who belong to a debating society, and wish to reconstruct the world after their pattern, or who are not good-natured but resolutely disagree. Then there is to spend our Sunday afternoons in an important consideration. Nearly always we go out of town by road, and after a few days spent in the atelier, its close atmosphere reeking with oil and turpentine, the smells, sights, and sounds of the country are only too delightful.

How Animals Practice Medicine.

Animals get rid of their parasites by using dust, mud, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek dark, airy places, drink-water and sometimes plunge into it. When a dog has lost its appetite it eats that species of grass which is called cat's grass, which acts as an emetic and purgative. Cats also eat grass. Sheep and cows, when ill, seek out certain herbs. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism always keeps, as far as possible, in the sun. The warrier antelope regularly organizes ambulances. Latreille cut the antennae of the ant, and other ants came and covered the wounded part with a transparent fluid secreted from their mouths. If a chimpanzee is wounded, it stops the bleeding by placing its hand on the wound or dressing it with leaves and grass. When the animal has a wounded leg or arm hanging on, it collects mud and forms a plug of its teeth. A dog, on being stung in the muzzle by a viper, was observed to plunge his head repeatedly for several days into running water. This animal eventually recovered, and was being dog was run over by a carriage. During three weeks in winter it remained lying in a brook, where its food was taken by the water. This animal recovered. A terrier hurt its right eye, and was cured under a counter, avoiding light and heat, although it habitually kept close to the fire. It adopted a general treatment, rest and abstinence from food. The water was changed from being in the upper surface of the paw, which it applied to the wounded eye; again licking the paw when it became dry. Animals suffering from traumatic fever treat themselves by drinking water. Application of cold water, which M. De-lanoy considers to be more certain than any of the other methods. In view of these interesting facts, we are, we think, forced to admit that hygienic and therapeutic as practiced by animals may, in the interest of psychology, be studied with advantage.

Many physicians have been keen observers of animals, their diseases, and the methods adopted by them in their efforts to cure themselves, and have availed of the knowledge so brought under their observation in their practice. —New Orleans Picayune.

German Girls. There is less difficulty in German girls of the middle class finding suitable partners for life than is the case in the same class in England, says a writer in the National Review. German girls, as a matter of fact, are more elevated in their social position than in household work. This does not prevent their being frequently very accomplished, often excellent musicians, but it does prevent a great deal of restlessness and vagabondage. A young man who marries in that class knows that he may reasonably expect his bride to be a good housewife. If he is in the upper middle class—for instance a shopkeeper—his wife often keeps the accounts of the shop. I have wondered at the close attention to business details shown by women who might have expected to be spared such exertions. But was assured that they preferred to be thus occupied; partly in order to save their children. It seemed to me that the master and mistress in most shops were on friendly terms with their assistants, who were permitted to rest at intervals during the day in a room behind the shop.

There are in Dundee, Scotland, eight companies dealing in mortgages and cattle in the Western and Northwestern States. In Edinburgh, the same is done in Glasgow three. The land and cattle companies in the United Kingdom operating in the United States hold in fee simple 2,016,383 acres, and by lease 1,445,736 acres. Their dividends in 1885 averaged over 8 per cent, but fell to only a little over 4 per cent in 1885. The causes of this decline are found in the rapid growth of capital in the United States, and the consequent decline in the rate of interest, which has occurred all over the world.

Power Right. "A down-East Bachelor," writing to a daily paper, gives as one reason why he has not married, his objection to the annoyances of a dowry right. It seems he deals in real estate, and has a large estate in his own name—and fears that his spouse may interfere with his business. "It is somewhat remarkable," says he, "that a determined effort has been made to get rid of dowry rights in the past. Law should, of course, be enacted giving the wife a fair interest in her husband's property; but there is no sense in singling out real estate and making that bear all the burden. In the complications of modern marital life husbands and wives sometimes disagree, and then the man can not dispose of his real property. Every-one conversant with legal disputes knows what practical hardships have resulted from dowry rights invalidating title deeds. It is quite remarkable, in view of the assertion of rights by the advocates of women, that men have not been allowed to have dowry rights in real estate on 'their own hook,' just as they do personal property."

The Dangers of Kissing. "If I was a woman and could see the faults of my fellows as well as the average observant man can I'd form a society to do away with kissing. It's got to be cut out that, anyway, within the next ten years. All that keeps it alive is its qualities as a foil for the genuine article." So a very worldly and very bright little woman said, in a burst of frankness a few hours ago. Said she: "If women didn't kiss so automatically and insincerely they wouldn't know what the beauty of the real kiss was." And I guess she was right. Apparently, kissing is a very ancient practice, and I don't think it's going to be cut out of the land and save one-tenth of 1 per cent of human lives every year—if life saving is the end and aim of science which you know I doubt. —Toronto Globe.

An Arkansas justice of the peace, who had just married a couple, turned to a man and said: "I don't believe that the woman will love, serve, and obey him." "I don't know," some one replied, "she seems to be a very amiable woman." "I don't think she is," the justice replied. "Why so?" "Because she used to be married." —Kaiser Wilhelm has accepted the god-fatherhood of the eleventh son of a butcher at Bremen.
