WHOLE NO. 854.

Request in Face.

(By R. A. Hodge.)—Written on his first visit to his uncle's grave, in the Genoa Cemetery, Nance Co., Neb., July 2, 1886. Today, the pale south wind doth blow, And yet, this spot the hour beguile; Here, in the grave is lying low, A Briton—far from the British Isles.

Far from Pentons' echoing lyons, And haunts renowned in Liddesdale; No more the wrestler's prize he wins, Nor hears the hounds upon the trail.

When right essayed her own to keep, This soldier trode to martial lay; Like Saxon hold, he did not creep, But sang "Rob Roy" and "Nelly Gray."

Tread softly, ye, reverent the spot, Where Briton finds a Spanish lot; He was a man, you are no more—Your deeds, let others count the score.

All time has but a single page, Though here he lies in double change; Should he not be the most strange?

And ever churchmen disagree—Like politicians—old and new; Some climb this, that, the other tree, And find on top the chosen few.

"Right or wrong" agnostic says, I'm blind to such philosophy; Spurious isms in these days Have killed the old Theosophy.

Proud science, with a haughty mien Declares that heat and cold are one; But "yes" and "no" have alimure of been, Just put the abstract on the run.

made have been carried out to the letter. With his record of more than five years' service, an open book from which all can read, Senator Van Wyck calls upon his constituents to place the seal of approval or dissent upon it. He challenges criticism of his motives or methods and invites discussion of the results.

During his entire service in the Senate the voice and vote of the senator from Nebraska have been heard and cast on every question of national as well as local importance. For the first time in years Nebraska found herself represented by a man of experience, ability and force of character, able to assert himself and make himself felt among the giant debaters of the upper house.

Upon every question relating to the great transportation interests affecting the producers of the country Senator Van Wyck has taken a decided stand and occupied a prominent position in their discussion. He has held the banner of national remedial legislation in the interests of the people of the west high in the Senate, where all could see it. Despite ridicule and abuse and detraction he was never swerved from the stand to which he was bound by his pledges and pledged by his honest convictions.

No member of the corrupting lobby ever dared to approach him twice. No suspicion of fraud taints his garments. Honest, fearless and unflinching, he has been a true representative of the best western sentiment, and of the wishes and demands of a western constituency.

Senator Van Wyck's record on the anti-monopoly issue has been no less decided than his record upon every other vital issue of the day. Upon the question of revenue reform, labor, public lands, currency contraction, pensions to deserving soldiers, and redress for injured government claimants he has never been forced to surrender a position or apologize for the stand taken.

Uttering in his efforts on behalf of measures of special advantage to the people of his own state, he has worked no less faithfully for those he believes to be of general utility.

It is on such a record that the senator bases his appeal for re-election, knowing and feeling that it is the soundest basis upon which any representative can look for an endorsement by an intelligent constituency.

His Own Record. As county after county in Nebraska, through their republican conventions, declares itself for Senator Van Wyck, the value of a straight record as a public representative begins to dawn upon the boogie gang of statesmen who have undertaken the job of defeating the senator's election in the interests of the confederate monopolies of the state.

Nearly six years ago General Van Wyck accepted the election to the United States Senate from the people of Nebraska through the legislative assembly in joint session. In his speech thanking the convention for the choice, he promised a faithful adherence to the will of the people and earnest work on behalf of his constituents. The promise was then her laws permit such an expression of opinion. In other states the people have no voice, even in the recommendation of their Senators; and if the citizens of Nebraska do not make themselves heard with an uncertain sound on this question, then they deserve to be ever bound and gagged by the corporations which annually take toll from that fair state to the extent of nearly the whole profits of production. The re-election of Senator Van Wyck to the U. S. Senate is not only the interests of the people of Nebraska, but is almost equally so to the whole country, for he has been the one bulwark in the U. S. Senate against corporate aggressions on public rights. Fearless, alert, able and experienced it is a wonder that with his record all the forces of monopoly should be opposed to his re-election. It is to be expected that the most plausible reasons will be advanced to this end by his enemies, and also by ostensible friends; but we have sufficient faith in the intelligence and patriotism of the people of Nebraska to believe that Chas. H. Van Wyck will be the next Senator if the public will have anything to do with it.

A Tough Nut to Crack. Mr. Blaine gives the true traders a tough nut to crack by pointing out the significant fact that all articles produced in any part of the United States are sent to every free port of duty, "which is more free trade than can be found in the whole continent of Europe." That is to say, the tariff only serves to protect us against foreign competition, without imposing local burden for restrictions of any sort; and thus we get the benefit of protection where protection is needed, while enjoying the advantage of free trade where that is practicable and desirable—in which respect we surpass every other government on earth.

An Entertaining, Reliable. Dwyer & Heitkemper can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the agency for such articles as have well-known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable. Having secured the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and to show our confidence, we invite you to call and get a Trial Bottle Free.

It is by just and expedient," says Mr. Blaine, "if it be the part of political wisdom to maintain the rates of farm products so as to afford a fair remuneration for agricultural labor, so as to enable the farming interests to maintain itself, then I say we can accomplish this only by finding somewhere in our own country a near market—somewhere in our own country a people not agriculturists, not producing themselves, but ready to buy and pay a good price for that which the farmer has to sell. I look, therefore, upon it as a perverted state of things, as a wrong protection, to say that a tariff for protection is beneficial, or mainly beneficial, to manufacturers. I regard it as essential to the interests of agriculture, which may be looked upon as the foundation of the country, inasmuch as it creates a market for its productions."

The great sea monster was seen not long ago near Kingston Point, New York. The serpent was making its way north, with five feet of head out of the water. The monster pursued two young men who were "in a boat," and naturally grew furious when the youngsters landed on shore, and proceeded to lash the bounding billows with a tail "which seemed to be about seventy-five feet distant from his head." The head around was as large as a flour barrel. The great monster "squirred from his mouth a stream of foamy stuff resembling long shavings from a pine plank." This story is published in the eastern newspapers as a matter of fact and no fish story and fully attested by living witnesses.

An old experienced rat-catcher says it is regular thing for a swarm of ship rats to "climb up the hawsers an' riggin' an' get onto the docks. There they'll bunch themselves together, and by squeakin' or some other means draw out all the neighboring land and dock rats onto the dock an' go for 'em. It don't matter how many or how few there are, you'll always find the dead bodies of the land rats left on the field after the fight." Ship rats will not live on land. When driven from one ship they immediately seek another.

By an explosion the other day in a natural gas well near Warsaw, Ill., Henry Miller, a workman, was killed, John Cops probably fatally injured and Homer McMahon and Charles Haakins tearfully burned. The explosion was caused by taking a lighted lantern into the well.

Ed. Nelson of Omaha, got into a fight the other day with Gus Horuquest, who threw Nelson to the floor and while in that condition a bull dog rushed upon him and before he could be taken off lacerated the man's leg from the hip down to his foot.

It is stated that a spring on Federal street, Baltimore, from which wayfarers love to drink, has been discovered to have its source in a cemetery, and an analysis reveals the fact that the gases from the decomposing bodies are soluble in the water.

NUMBER SEVEN. Numerous combinations in which seven plays an important part. The frequent recurrence of the number seven in the scriptures, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, seems to indicate that it is an important number in certain events, that it may be termed the prophetic, representative symbolic number consecrated in the holy scriptures and the religion of the Jews and other nations by many mysterious events and circumstances.

The old testament informs us that God completed the work of creation in seven days, and set apart the seventh day to be a day of rest for all mankind. The slayer of Abel was to be punished seven-fold and the slayer of Lamech seventy and seven-fold.

Seven victims were to be offered on any special occasion. When Abraham and Abimelech wanted to confirm an oath they took seven ewe lambs of the flock. Seven years were to be observed as the length of the feasts of tabernacles and passover.

Italian Fun and Parade. "A queer set of fellows are our Italian pipe-layers," remarked a gentleman connected with one of the leading natural gas companies of the city on his return from one of their camps.

"After they get the barrel ready half a dozen of them take hold of one of the smaller men, and, despite his protests and struggles, dump him head first into the barrel. Sometimes they have a good deal of trouble at this stage of the game, but they get there in the end.

"The barrel and its living contents are then thrown over, given a hearty push, and sent down the hill a-flying. The fellow sometimes lets his legs stick out at the bottom, but others don't seem to you can't imagine how funny they look flying around in the air as the barrel bounces up and down over the stones and rough spots.

"I have been told that these low-class Italians will walk on four legs. Maybe you remember the story that was published some time ago about a party of Italians, finding a drowned child in the river and lowering it to the shore. That was a true bill. They were caught in the act by a country constable who was going to sue them for it. The story may go down as hard as the colt would, but it is a true story, and very true."—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

They Don't Pay. Some queer things can be seen about the Capitol during the last days of the session. One of the queerest is the crowd of collectors coming to Congress may be an honor, but it cannot be said to make men honorable. The average of dead beats in Congress is quite as great as outside. The last days of the session you will find a swarm of florists, lively stable men, hotel and boarding-house keepers, constables, and professional collectors swarming the corridors, looking after delinquent members and trying to get their dues.

"Have not got one, General," said the agent, blandly. "Sorry, but everything is out." As soon as the member went away the agent inquired if he would have the coupe. "That's all right," he remarked; "we've got plenty of carriages, but he's a dead beat. Never pays for anything. Why, I've got a bill against him for two years out. The gall of the man!"

"Are there many such men in Congress?" "Yes, quite a number; we've been stung by them for hundreds of dollars—by both senators and members. They are the worst customers in that way, because you can't force collections. They hardly ever have anything more than their clothes on their backs, and punish them; you can't garnish their salaries. And the airs they give themselves! We are very careful about trusting Congressmen, I tell you!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A young physician while diagnosing a case fired a number of questions at his patient which flew wide of the mark. He was finally successful, however. "You—er—sometimes have a very tired face. Ah, that kind of a night did you say?" "A night watchman."

"You need a coat-of-arms, Mr. Hoey," commented a distinguished Englishman after he had been shown through the great estate of Hoey. "Indeed! I hadn't thought of that," was the reply. "Who was your father?" "A night watchman." "A night watchman? Then it will be easy; any herald's college will readily trace your lineage. Ah, that kind of a night did you say?" "A night watchman."
