The Buchanan Comedy Co.

Monday evening this Company opened their week's engagement here with the celebrated play "Fanchon, the Cricket," to a pleased audience. It would seem as though the public would never tire of this piece, and certainly, as played by this troupe, it is like a good picture, new beauties being seen each time. The leading character, Fanchon, as presented by Maud Howe, is a study in human nature, and the vivacious actress truly holds the glass to nature in every part of her delineation of the character.

Last Saturday just after dinner, Mrs. Compton, wife of Walter Compton, was struck by an unruly sheep, while in the yard, violently throwing her to the ground, and breaking her limb just above the ankle. Dr. Evans was called, who set the limb.

We have often wondered how farmers who had their farming implements at this season of the year lying around promiscuously in the field and yard, could stand it to see an agricultural implement dealer ride by and grin. One passed here recently while ours were lying outside and the grin he cast made us mad in a minute. We took off our coat and commenced putting them under cover, and by 5 o'clock we were ready for him to return. We looked in vain. He went some other road.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Clark returned last Saturday from Omaha, where they have been the past week, taking care of her brother, Geo. Westcott. Geo. has not been able to work for the past two years, and about a month ago, believing there was something in his system that had to be driven out, he went to Omaha, placed himself under treatment of an eminent physician, who after three weeks treatment, succeeded in bringing the measles out of him in proper shape. Geo. expects to be home in a few days, and is in a fair way to have his former good health restored.
