(From our regular correspondent.) The question of an extra session of the Fiftieth Congress to begin in October and run into the regular session, is now a topic of speculation officials are under indictment and here. Officers of the Executive Departments hope such a calamity will be averted, as the President is reported as saying that he would not call Congress together unless it became necessary, in order to avoid a financial depression. Officers of the Departments have a much happier fidence. life when Congress is away, for with hunters who linger as long as the session lasts.

But the business of this great country has grown too vast to be carried on by the methods which served well enough half a century ago. Not one-tenth of the work that Congress ought to do ever gets done at all, and one of the chief reasons for this is the waste of time from March to January, for although Congress meets on the first Monday in December, it never gets down to business before the holidays.

The cure for this is in the President's hands. The Fiftieth Congress began its official existence on the 4th of this mouth and its members are now on pay. He has only to exnecessary legislation.
