Small hopes are entertained for his recovery.

The above we get from a friend in Genoa. The Platte Center Argus gives different version: Charles, a sixteenyears-old son of Michael Sheridan, who was driving a binder, got off to oil the machine, when the flies so bothered the horses that they ran off. They circled around through a good deal of corn and oats, and after running about 214 miles, the young man, doubtless thinking he might stop them, ran in front of them for that purpose, but was knocked down in front of the sickle, the guard cutting some painful, but not necessarily serious wounds, three in the shoulder and one in the side and hip. He was otherwise considerably bruised and had not opportune aid been rendered by a man near by, possibly young Sheridan would have been fatally wounded. The horses were not injured.

Washington Letter. [From our regular correspondent.] The Government fiscal year ended June 30th, and I do not know how I could interest your readers more than by giving a resume of Federal finances for the period named. For that time Government receipts were $371,380,893, against $336,439,727, the previous year. The disbursements for the same time, inclusive of pensions and interest on the notional debt, were $268,515,190, against $242,483,138, the preceding year; the surplus was $102.864,703, against $93,-956,589, the year before. With the exception of the years 1882, 1883 and 1884, the surplus has not been so large since 1867. The receipts are greatly in excess of the estimates. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his annual report, December 1886, put them at $356,000,000. Thus and the question that drafts all others into utter insignificance is how to dispose of it, or rather to prevent the National treasury from absorbing all the country's circulating medium and thus paralyze every interest of the people. THE NECESSITY OF TRAINING OUR PHYSICAL AS WELL AS MENTAL POWERS, BY ROBERT M'KEAN.

"A sound mind in a sound body" is an incient motto to indicate the perfect man. So intimate is the relation of all our mental and physical powers that neither can be healthy when the other i

Neglect of the physical health is great fault of our times, as a little care ful observation will show.

The greed for gain, the ambition for place and power, and the American awakened the other night by the report thrift and inherent disposition to excel of a gun, and springing up to see what all others, have developed some one was the matter, he found the body of talent at the sole expense of the others. his father lying on the floor with the top all these tend to make our people lose of his head shot off, and his mother sight of those systematic and well-eslying near the door, insensible. The tablished rules so well known to the scientific world, on which our physical well being depends.

The evil is a great and growing one. Take all the great men of our country who have passed away during the last year, did they live the time allotted to man,-three score and ten years? No. Why? Just at the age when their large experience and observation, made their judgment and council of the utmost value to their country and mankind. they are snatched away by the fell de-

Take each individual man and out of some ten or twelve of America's brightest lights, all with the exception of two or three came to an untimely end, by disease whose origin dates back to the time when they began to dwarf their physical to sustain and build up their mental powers. Why is this? is it for the want of knowledge, when their sole aim is the pursuit of wisdom, or is it pure neglect? Perhaps.

As to men who have had proper re gard for the laws of health, we may men tion Gladstone, Longfellow, George Bancroft, Oliver Wendell Holmes, and these men, as we all know, lived or are living to a vigorous old age.

And, on the other hand, may be men tioned Prince Bismark, Horace Greely and the Hon. John A. Logan. While these men may have had a large and robust frame at one time, furnishes proof for us that men must exercise and avoid exposure or their bodies crumble and they fall. The importance of a sound body has beretofore been sadly underestimated by the people at large. In their very liberal provisions for public education, they have had regard to the mental powers alone.

How many schoolrooms and churches are constructed with regard to so simple a matter as pure air? There is no doubt that in many of these, the young and growing pupils have sown the seed

The hardy ways of the early pioneer are more a tribute to his ignorance or stupidity than to his native hardihood. for we find no class of people so decrepit from rheumatism and miasma that poisons the blood and blights the life of the unfortunate pioneer, who passed his youth in the poorly warmed

The Greeks had a high regard for this branch of training. So much so that the Spartans set aside all others for it. But in modern times and especially in America, physical training in anything like a popular sense has been almost wholly disregarded.

Is it not about time that we begin to give this subject the attention its im-

CHARACTER, BY ALICE WATKINH. In treating this subject it would be well in the first place to give its mean-qualities cannot be wholly concealed. There are many persons who may be aid to have no other possession in the world but their character, yet they stand as firmly upon it as any crowned king For although superiority and genius always command admiration, good charac ter secures respect, and respect is the thing to be most proud of. Also whoever strives to do his duty faithfully. is fulfilling the purpose for which he was created and building up in himself the foundations of a manly character.

Has character no properties? It certainly has; nothing is better for the formation of good character than selfcontrol, for it is at the root of all virtues. It is also the very essence of character. Work is pas of the best educators of character, for it calls forth and develand perseverance, giving a man skill in his special dealings with the affairs of resulted in a tie and the curious law in ordinary life.

Manners are the principal, outward signs of character. It is not so simple and unimportant as some may think i to be. The manners which are neglected as small things are those which decide men, for or against us.

In character and manners the supreme excellence is simplicity. Every action thought or feeling contributes to character either to elevate or degrade it. By intimation of acts, the character becomes slowly and imperceptibly, but at length decidedly formed. The several acts may seem in tinuous acts of daily life. Like snowflakes, they fall unheeded, each flake flakes makes the avalanche. So do repeated acts, one following another, at length become solidified into habit and determine the action of the individual, for good or for evil, and, in a word, form the character.

Success in life is achieved genius than by character, and it is by patience and self-control that a truly brave character is perfected. Character exhibits itself in conduct, guided by integrity and practical wisdom. Although the force of example will greatly influence the formation of character, the sustaining force of one's own spirit must be the main stay. It is a common saying, "Men are known by the company apacity and apacity and wealth? Have capacity and wealth? Have they relations to character?

Intellectual capacity has no necessary relations whatever to character, for it is sometimes found associated with the lowest morals.

Still less has wealth any connection with the elevation of character. It is more frequently the cause of its corruption and degredation, while a condition of comparative poverty is agreeable with character in its highest form. A little girl once said to her mother. "Ma will the rich and poor people live together when they all go up to heaven?" The mother answered, "Yes my dear, they will all be alike then." "Well then ma," resumed the little girl, "why don't rich and poor Christians associate together?" The mother's reply was, "Sally had better put you to bed, my

Of course the answer can be easily imagined. It is wealth that has made the rich corrupt.

Character can thus be divided into two classes, the good and the bad, and a person with a bad character is very abusive, but when certain persons abuse the release the series of the person of character is very abusive, but when certain persons abuse the release the property described as follows, to wit, lot No. 6 in block 209, in the town (now city) of Columbus, in Platte County, State of Nebraska, was purchased by George W. > Olive Street, second door north of First National Bank. Heat Radiator.

"In peace prepare for war;" in summer, prepare for winter, and among your preparations don't forget that if you can save one-third to one-half on your expense for fuel, by an appliance of little cost, it will pay you to take a little trouble to provide yourself with one.

Francis Marak, jr., of Everest, Kan., the inventor of the appliance referred to, is here disposing of territory, and has made some sales of counties. The appliance is an ordinary drum except that

A fire, on the ground, under the open canopy of heaven; two posts, a cross stick and the pot of victuals hanging over the fire.

Second, the same, only a rude wall around, and a cone-shaped roof, with a hole in the middle for the smoke to curl out at.

Third, the open grate, in the open fire-place, a great portion of the heat escaping up the chimney into the outer air.

ney into the outer air.

Fourth, the stove,
Pifth, the stove and drum, increasing the amount of surface heated by the same fuel.

Sixth, the greatly improved drum, or RADIATOR, with a more intense and therefore more penetrating heat from the same amount of fuel; forming a reservoir for heat except as it escapes through the metallic enclosure, and what little gets out through the chimney.

Abundant certificates can be given from those who have used the RADIATOR that it does all that is claimed for it, but the following are sufficient:

I have tested the qualities of the Marak Radis or, and it gave satisfaction in every particula e claims for it. Dr. A. J. Rodgers.

I have tried Francis Marak's patent radiator on my cook stove and found it to do all that he claims. It caused the kettle to boil and the oven to heat, quick, with one-half the fuel we had been using without the Radiator. We got breakfast with 19 corn cobs, and the oven was hot enough to bake biscuits.
