J. R. Smith, of Oconee, in town Wednesday, we asked him for particulars of the sale of barley by him that has lately been so much talked about, which he gave us as follows: he had 780 bushels of barley to sell and the highest price he could get, offered, from the dealers. was 27 cts. a bushel. The agent of the Farmers' Association forwarded a sample and Mr. Smith, as a result, got 50 cts. a bushel on the track for his barley, which, deducting the agent's commission of one cent a bushel, left him a gain of just $171.60, over what the dealer had offered him. Mr. Smith thinks that the $171.60 is just as good to him as to anybody else, and he has a great deal of faith in the Farmers' Association as a business. One of his neighbors, Mr. S. S. Sanford did better still, making 2 cts. a bushel more than Mr. Smith did. Mr. Smith also adds that members of the Farmers' Association are getting (Nov. 30th) 31½ cts. for corn, while the dealers PERSONAL.

Domestic Infelicity.

Julia Moore and Herman Schitterer were married at Columbus, Nebraska, in Herman was then working at his trade as a barber. Julia was then fair to look upon, the barber beheld her, became smitten with the maiden's charms. and then sacrificed himself at the shrine of matrimony. The match did not prove to be a happy one, for the lovely Julia had a taste for romance and travel, consequently after a short honey-moon she left the barber with a woman similarly situated named Abts, for Wyoming where she remained a long time. Herman in the meantime took a trip to California expecting peradventure to see his wife on the way, but she then had no use for the barber. She had other and sweeter attractions than the disciple of the razor. The barber returned to Columbus last spring and began a divorce suit there against his wife which was recently withdrawn, Julia returning to Columbus, she and Herman made up and came to Denver where Schittere Ira Briggle, the banker of Humphrey, worked at his trade in a shop, corner of Fifteenth and Holladay streets, till he and Julia had another out, and he left for San Diego, California, where he is now supposed to be. Julia then began a divorce suit against her spouse in the county court alleging cruelty and desertion. Soon after the starting of this suit Julia under the name of "Bonnie" Moore married a Wm. Booth, a printer, residing at 1816 Curtis street, neither waiting for the termination of the divorce suit. Bonnie and Billy did not get along very well together, their dispositions being too vivacious, so they eparated for a time, and she then began o write Billy notes, and afterwards struck another fellow, who has threaten ed to take Bonnie's part and wipe the earth with Willie. Booth's friends feel sorry for him and say that he is being persecuted, while others think that he was too previous. Yesterday afternoon Colonel Deweese obtained a decree of divorce before Judge Miller of this county court for the fair lady without fee or reward, or the hope thereof, and she went her way rejoicing. Whether she will persuade Willie to re-marry or

Where a cause is tried to jury and their verdict is set aside and a new trial granted, and the second trial results in substantially the same verdict, upon which a judgement is rendered by the trial court, and for the reversal of which, proceedings in error are prosecuted in the supreme court, a petition in error being also filed by the defendant in error. by which he seeks to have judgement rendered on the first verdict, the action of the district court will not be disturb-
