Nebraska comes as near to being the farmer's and stock-raiser's paradise as any equal amount of land on the earth's surface. Her soil of lacustrine origin, literally "made earth," it is as rich in all that goes to furnish plant food as the best gardens of the older states; underlying all, in the gravelly bottom of the prime lake, at varying depths beneath the surface, is an unending body of pure water; the soil being porous, cereals of all varieties have the benefit of this through capillary attraction, and an extra amount of rain falling from the clouds finds its way readily into the soil below the surface.

It is owing to this peculiarity of the soil that it has become famous for withstanding both dry and wet seasons. The summer of 1887, for instance, was remarkably dry in many parts of the United States, but here, with light showers and some seeding time, and others as the grain was sowing out, Nebraska had good crops and her prosperity was so marked as to attract the universal attention of those husbandmen east who are always on the lookout for bettering their condition. In all the record of the years since Nebraska soil has been cultivated by civilized men a total failure of crops, from any cause, has never been known.

THE CLIMATE is free from the malarial taint and the dense fogs of the sea level, and from the rigor mountain top. It is that of an elevated, undulating plain where the drainage is abundant, and the atmosphere is kept pure by constant motion.

With a soil unequalled anywhere as the basis of agriculture, and with such a climate, farmers and stockraisers have flourished amazingly, and the State is so great in extent as Maryland, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island and West Virginia, all put together, has settled rapidly, there yet being room and hearty welcome for hundreds of thousands more, and tens of thousands of manufacturing and business enterprises.

For solid, steady, lasting business ventures, history shows that nothing has proved so valuable a foundation as a good farming country. Where farmers thrive, the factory's wheels are constantly humming and the merchant is able to promptly meet his bills; mechanics get good wages and have plenty to do, and centers of business and means of culture grow and flourish apace.

Wideawake to their interests, men of Nebraska seeing their needs are everywhere moving to their supply. The immense amount of farm machinery used (and it is nowhere used to better advantage) is a sure proof of the success of our soil requiring no side-hill plows, and no precautions against stumps or stones, suggests that the factories for furnishing these, or a great number of them, could be located at home, thus saving transportation, and helping to make a home market for farm products, besides increasing business for merchants and dealers.

The immense numbers of hogs and cats suggest the packing-house, the tannery, the leather store and the shoe factory.

The untold richness of the soil and its capacity for raising corn, tomatoes, peas, beans, etc., assures success to canning institutions wherever they may be conducted with anything like ordinary business ability.

The demand for better breeds of stock, points to a rich harvest by those who will locate here with thoroughbred horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry, to supply the demand which is constantly increasing as farmers become able to invest.

Railroads and Civilization. Railroads have so cheapened the cost of transportation that, while a load of wheat loses all its value by being hauled one hundred miles on a common road, meat and flour enough to supply one man a year can, according to Mr. Edward Atkinson, be hauled 1,500 from the west to the east for one day's wages of that man, if he is a skilled mechanic. If the freight rates are diminished in the future as in the past, this can soon be done for one day's wages of a common laborer.

The number of persons employed in constructing, equipping and operating our railroads is about two millions. The combined armies and navies of the world, while on peace footing, will draw from gainful occupations 3,455,000 men.

These create wealth—these destroy it. Is it any wonder that America is the richest country in the world?—[From "The Building of a Railway," by Thomas Curtis Clarke, in Scribner's Magazine for June.]

It is reported from Kickapoo, Wis., that on the night of the 23d Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Drake, an aged couple, were shot dead in their own house by unknown parties, and the throats of their two little grand children were cut from ear to ear. P. railroad, while moving about six miles east of Kearney, and fell under the cars which crushed his left leg and left arm. He is now at the Grand Central hotel in Kearney.

W. R. Sells, agent for the Pacific express company at Fremont, was found dead in his bed in his room at the New York hotel. The supposition prevails that death was caused by an over dose of morphine administered by himself, but not with intent to commit suicide. His matters of account and money with the company are said to be all correct.

There is one thing that every tax payer in the county is interested in, in selecting a candidate for the next legislature. The man who is chosen should be one who will work to secure the passage of a law that will prevent the county treasury from being a bank ridden institution. We do not object to having the county funds placed in a bank for safe-keeping, but we want the county to draw the interest instead of the treasurer.—[Norfolk News.]

Little Caroline or "Lena" Schlessman who was a scholar in a Seward county school during the blizzard in January and had one foot frozen and amputated, is in the city for the purpose of having an artificial foot fitted. She is known as Lena Woebbecke because at the time of the blizzard she was staying at the house of Mr. Woebbecke. The generous sum raised for her relief goes far toward making her comfortable.—[O. World.]

The Omaha Republican of Thursday gives a half-column account concerning the arrest of John Lisco, "one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Clark and ex-sheriff of Merriek county," on a warrant charging him with obtaining money under false pretences.

Mr. Lisco pronounces the arrest as one of the dirtiest pieces of blackmail he ever heard of and the charge an audacious falsehood. The difference grew out of a contract for hay. The title of the case is Day & Cowles (of Omaha) vs. John Lisco.

From 8,000 to 10,000 people gathered at Wynore on the 21st inst. to celebrate the seventh anniversary of that city. Governor Thayer and staff, deputy commander Henry of the G. A. With music, dinner and a sham battle among the militia, the companies from Beatrice taking a prominent part, the day passed pleasantly.

Charles Tobias, a brakeman about 20 years of age, was found on top of a north-bound freight train on the evening of the 23d inst., which had just pulled into Stella station, insane. He had bruises on the back part of the head and some internal injuries, the former evidently made by a sand-bag or some such instrument, as there was no abrasion of the skin. It is supposed he had been hit by a tramp, as the train crew had ejected a number of them between Falls City and Stella, and others were found in the cars after their arrival at Stella.

A case of hydrophobia was reported last week six miles southwest of York. G. W. Mason is the victim, who was bitten by his dog about the middle of last February. The same dog bit a calf and a colt, both dying. He was seized first with spasms, then becoming more violent, and now he is tied down to the floor. Eight physicians have visited the patient, a majority of whom consider the present attack brought on by the crazed condition of the mind through worry instead of being genuine hydrophobia. Future developments will be awaited with great interest.

The Seward canning company, says the Blade, will put up this season the product of 400 acres of sweet corn, 300 acres of tomatoes, 80 acres of peas, 75 acres of pickles, 30 acres of beans and 10 acres of pumpkins. The Omaha Republican publishes on the 27th inst., another large number of preferences expressed for candidates for president and vice-president from citizens of this state. The matter embraced in this expression of opinion occupies fully six columns. By summary in this lot Blaine still leads as first choice, with Gresham second. For vice-president Harrison first choice and Hawley second. These expressions continue to show that the republican party in this state is a unit on the protection of American industries and American labor.

The Omaha Republican of Thursday last week, contains nearly three columns of matter occupied by the citizens of Nebraska in expressing their choice for candidate for president and vice-president. In the two expressions of preference now published, Blaine, for first choice has the lead over all competitors, with Gresham second. As second choice Gresham leads, Allison and Sherman next in the order in which they are named. For vice president neither of the gentlemen named has many where near a majority of all, but Harrison leads, with Hawley, Allison and Gresham close together in the order named.

A case of accidental shooting, resulting in the almost instant death of a young fellow named Samuel Stump, occurred Tuesday night at a school house near Diller, Jefferson county. Stump and one J. W. Fous, the district school teacher, together with several other young men were rehearsing a play, a part of which called into action a revolver. Fous, in carrying out his part leveled a revolver at Stump's head, pulling the trigger, and to the consternation of the whole party Stump fell over on his face apparently lifeless. The ball had entered his mouth, dead following in fifteen minutes. Coroner Sommers, of this place, went to the scene of the shooting today, but not called to hold an inquest, as it was clearly shown to have been accidental. Fous is almost crazy with grief. Stump's body will be taken to Iowa for burial, where he came from a short time ago. All parties connected with the affair are highly respected.

A terrible water spout burst in the northwestern part of Dawes county at 7 o'clock on the evening of May 27, doing a great amount of damage. The water rushed down White river in a solid wall eight to ten feet deep, carrying everything possible before it. All the high-water bridges are gone and a number of railroad bridges. Five miles of track is submerged on the Rapids City and Wyoming branches of the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley railroad. Farmers in these valleys lost live stock and buildings. One farmer lost twenty-one head of stock. No loss of life has been yet reported but it is feared that the future developments will reveal the fact that there has been considerable. There is no communication from the other towns of these rivers. They are northwest of here and the water spout came from the northwest; consequently it is feared that there has been terrible damage and loss of life on the other side. It has rained steadily since 4 o'clock yesterday and is still raining and considerable damage has been done to farmers outside the water spout district. It was impossible for the railroad to do much today towards repairing the road and bridge, as the constant rains kept the water so high it is hardly expected to get a train over the washout for 24 hours at least, if even then.

One of the most atrocious crimes in the annals of humanity was perpetrated about 8 o'clock on the morning of the 23d on the farm of a man named Greenwood, about fifteen miles from Curtis in the adjoining county of Lincoln. Greenwood's wife was Mrs. Annie Bryant, Greenwood's seventeen years old daughter. While employed in a restaurant at Curtis the girl met a young man named Lem Bryant, with whom she kept company until about three months ago, when it was discovered that she was in a delicate condition. She then disclosed the fact to her parents. Her father was very angry and said he would drown her. Both the girl and her family were highly esteemed, and popular feeling ran very strong against Bryant. This, in connection with the fact that the matter was brought before the grand jury, induced him to marry the girl. He soon abandoned her, however, and refused to contribute to her support. Hearing that an indictment was about to be brought against him, Bryant left and has not been heard from since. The condition of the girl was such that she was unable to work and was compelled to seek shelter at her home in Lincoln county. Her father at first refused to let her come back but finally yielded to the intercessions of her mother. He brooded a good deal over the disgrace to his name which Annie had brought upon the family and he frequently exhibited symptoms of insanity which grew more marked as the time for her confinement approached. Yesterday morning Mr. and Mrs. Hatfield were on the way to town and were passing by Greenwood's house when Mrs. Greenwood came rushing from the house with an infant babe in her arms, not yet dressed, exclaiming "For God's sake shoot the first person who comes there." Annie had given birth to the child a few minutes before her father came in and drew his revolver and shot and killed her. A posse of citizens left for the scene of the murder at once.—[Bee.]

The strikes in many parts of Germany are spreading rapidly. The strikers came into collision with and desperately fought the police at Mayence and Hamburg on the 21st and a thousand striking workmen patrolled the streets of Newminster, singing the Marseilles.

A large number of arrests were made in both towns affected by strikers. The strikers are receiving active encouragement and assistance from the socialists.

A general unemployment exists on account of the European war cloud spreading and gathering strength. In Roumania the rising among the peasants, due, some say, to the efforts of Russian emissaries, while others ascribe it to agrarian causes, and the multiplication of officials continues to give the government serious trouble. The peculiar disease of what may be called "officialdom" is attacking several countries at once. It threatens to break down the republic of France and at the same time appears in Roumania.

Washington Letter. (From our regular correspondent.) Judge Walter G. Gresham's presidential bid has been undoubtedly the political event of the week in this city, from where it seems to have started. Judge Gresham is extremely popular personally in Washington, and many people here would rejoice to see him personally in Washington, and many people here would rejoice to see him personally in Washington, and many people here would rejoice to see him personally in Washington.
