The Hastings Gazette-Journal is making strong objections to the mayor of Hastings because he doesn't enforce the laws. "Gamblers and prostitutes." says the Journal, "the two worst specimens of humanity on earth, have flocked here because they felt that they could enjoy the freedom of the city with less restraint than ever before." This is the case everywhere when the officials do not do their duty as men sworn to enforce the laws.

-This week's JOURNAL, going to press on the evening of election day, is necessarily devoid of election news, which, of course, is all that would now be satisfying on the political questions. We were in receipt Thursday of the very excellent letter that we print elsewhere from Mr. Reed, and, not having opportunity to print before election, we mailed a copy to a number of daily republican papers of the state, of course with a view that it would "affect the election," as the author hoped to do. We presume that never before had here been so big a political meeting in the county as that held by the republicans at Platte Center last Thur day evening. There were delegation and bands present from Humphrey, Genoa and Columbus, and the bright uniforms and brilliant torches, with the stirring music, added to the interest of the occasion, while Senator Manderson's speech was a masterly address, listened to, from start to finish, by a very attentive aulience, who appreciated highly the senator's clear and effective arguments and witticisms. His reference to and quotaions from the report of the British royal commission, against free trade in England, were somewhat of a surprise to the andience, and a sort of knock-down argument. He didn't say much about Lord Sackville, but thought that the president had done one good thing, viz: in objecting to West because he had advised an American citizen to vote for Cleveland for president.

-In the days long gone by, when the editor of the JOURNAL had only two horses and a little pony, he used to be much abused by Hensley for driving the pony. Hensley was then publishing the Era. He now owns a horse and has been promoted to be postmaster under a democratic administration, and it is our opinion that he "ought to go between the shafts and let the pony ride on the seat;" that he "ought to get a younger horse, and turn the old one out to rest-give him his time:" that he ought to "get a smaller wagon;" that he "ought to feed his stack of bones more oats, and get a little flesh on him;" that he oughtn't "let the poor. old dumb beast stand out shivering in the cold." Ours is not the only good memory in the world, but we would hardly have recalled these things unless we had seen Hensley coming up street Monday morning before our window. He must quit it.

-While many of the states east of u have been having snow and rain, Nebraska has been reveling in the finest fall weather we ever saw. It has been so fine and warm that farmers and stockraisers have not seen any necessity, as yet, to fix up shelters, etc.; been busy with husking corn and other fall work.

You evidently, like the police court, have passed judg- | Select reading ment after hearing but one side of the case. The facts are substantially as follows: The drum corps went to give Mr. Tasker a musical serenade; this is evident from the fact that they took with ley and M. P. Hurd; negative, C. J. The charivari that the month of October, 1888. you speak of was not participated in by the boys charged by Tasker in his complaint in police court, and had you taken pains to hear both sides of the case, you would have found this to be true, and your laudation of Mr. Tasker might have been dispensed with. You say "The complaint, Mr. Tasker says, was by no means made in malice but as a duty to society and in the interest of good order." 23, 28. If Tasker's sole purpose was the discharge of a duty to society and the interest of good order, why did he at first want the police to
