At Mason, Iowa, Mr. Scheidler, died last Wednesday. Two weeks before, while out driving, sparks from his pipe ignited his shirt, burning him.

It must be conceded that Congressman Dorsey's plan of referring the half dozen applicants for one office to the pigs-in-clover puzzle is an ingenious scheme.

WHEN Mrs. Harrison, who now happens to be the wife of a president, returned home the other evening, carrying the parcels she had bought, society people were very much shocked.

A TELEGRAM was received in Fremont announcing the death this morning of W. A. Marlow at Denver.

speculation. The case will be one of much interest.

Recently a man named John Hunter, who is well known in the northern part of this county and known as a tough citizen at that, was arrested for forgery and taken to Stanton where he was tried and convicted.

He wanted a new trial and his lawyer demanded a good secured note for $100 before he would continue his case. Hunter then asked Tom and Gale Church, who live near Clarkson and who are relatives of his, to sign the note for him and he at once informed an officer that he would turn state's evidence and inform on the Churches for stealing clothing at Schuyler, Clarkson and Stanton.

He said they had been doing a wholesale business in bringing into stores and stealing goods, hiding what they stole at one town with the people of the gang who lived in another town.

He gave the information that goods had been hid in holes dug in the ground and in haystacks at the farms of the Churches living south of Schuyler and near Clarkson. A Stanton merchant who had lost by robbery came down here and got out a search warrant last Friday and he, with Sheriff Kudras and John F. Mefferd went down and searched the premises of the old man Church and later the first two named went up and searched the places of the Clarkson Churches, but nothing was found.

It is expected that more will follow as Hunter evidently knows something and is desperate and will give it away. A clue may be had now to some of our store robberies which the past few years—(Schuyler Quill.)

Swine Notes. Young pigs will thrive in good clover. No one material is a perfect food, and it is important to have a variety.

Hogs ought to be kept gaining steadily from birth to maturity. Even during the summer it will pay to see that the quarters of the hogs should be kept clean, as this aids in promoting health.

Blue grass is a good feed for hogs, but does not equal clover. Given a choice between the two and clover will be found much the best.

During growth it is an item to promote the development of bone and muscle and to supply such foods as are best calculated to secure this.

Young pigs soon learn their feeding place as well as the hours that they generally receive their food. The necessity of feeding them as regularly as possible.

When hogs have all they can eat the next thing they need is a comfortable place to sleep. As a rule it is only when a hog is hungry that he is restless and uneasy.

While it can be secured at a fair price bran is a cheaper food than corn for pigs during the summer when they are feeding in a good pasture, but when feeding indoors there is nothing that will excel good summer corn.

Properly managed a good brood sow can be made one of the most profitable animals on the farm. Two good litters of pigs can easily be secured and with good feed and care some increase at least can be desired in a short time.

If pigs are kept in the run of the pastures it will be found a good plan to provide a covered trough with salt and ashes arranged so that they can help themselves to what they want. A little copper will add to the value as a health preserver.—[N. J. Shepherd in Nebraska Farmer.]
