Hubbard—Tomorrow the sheriff takes charge of our place, and we will be without a home. Wife—Well, I told you all the time if you would buy that tradesman suit; money is thus brought from abroad and used here to the up-building of our community and to the advantage of every town in the county and the increase in value of every acre of land. That's what we are here for. Then why not that the Loop? Various notices and advertisements.

Friday last a picnic was held at Darling's grove for the pupils of the school in district 44, Miss Glass, teacher. We are informed that the picnic was over early in the afternoon, and that the teacher left the grove, about a mile from the school house, to get her warrant on the treasurer, afterwards returning, and looking after some of the children, but leaving some to care for themselves. Four of M. Sheedy's children wandered through corn and oats fields till about sundown they reached the school-house. Teachers cannot be too careful in taking charge of young children especially on occasions out of the ordinary. The theory of the public is that, for the time being, teachers take the place of the parent, in protecting the little ones from danger of all kinds. Various notices and advertisements.

Some of our high-flying metropolitan exchanges are inclined to deride the efforts of the country-side newspaper correspondent, but once in a while, in the brief space allotted them, they strike the very pith and point of a matter, as for instance: the Octavia correspondent of the Schuyler Sun, made tired probably by some fellow who regarded the saloon as a divine institution, says: Why nurse a cure to cure a dollar? Why nurse a cure to cure a dollar when you know that it never has made one gentleman in all these years? Why not nurse some institution that will turn out a real lady or gentleman once in awhile? The present policy of Nebraska is to levy a license on the traffic, on the principle of making it pay at least a part of what it costs the local government, and will get dollar year by year if no move is made toward home industries.—Schuyler Sun. Various notices and advertisements.

If any of you have good jokes, don't let them lie idle—like money, they are not of very much account unless put into circulation. We got this one concerning Charlie Fisher, who used to be a telegraph operator here, and one of the brightest boys and worst practical jokes in the world. It was told at the time (years ago) but will do to repeat: One day a gentleman entirely unknown to Charlie stepped into the office and asked him if he knew a message there sent. Instead of Charlie's asking his name, quick as flash after the inquiry—"Does your photograph always accompany messages to you?" of course the important individual, (Charlie Francis Adams), was capable of appreciating the joke on himself, and when his companion came into the office to learn the cause of his uncontrollable laughter, he told them the good deed the operator made on him. Various notices and advertisements.

On Friday night of last week a party of young people at Platteville consisting of W. D. Henshott and others, Miss Gertrude Gans, Ella Marshall, Miss McChesney, Helen Holt and little Alice Ahrensman went to Rev. Otto's to practice singing for the dedication. When ready to return in increasing the humor in the dark one who was waiting put the lines in the latter ring instead of the bit. After going a short distance the horses began to run and ran into a wire fence turning down the posts and tangling themselves up in the wire cutting both horses so severely that it has not been able to be talked home. It seems almost incredible that the wagon was not overturned and the inmates thrown out and injured if not killed. But all escaped with only a terrible fright. They carried with only a terrible fright. They did not even seem as badly as always said to be in danger, but remained in their seats to which, it probably due their safety. Various notices and advertisements.
